

The Resignations In France, North Ireland:

By O'Neill

'Wicked Men' Blamed

BELFAST (AP) — Prime Minister Terence O'Neill resigned Monday under mounting pressure from his divided Unionist party and the Roman Catholic minority in Northern Ireland into another political crisis.

O'Neill blamed the failure of his six-year fight for reform and moderation on "wicked men" on both extremes of the ancient feud between Protestants and the Roman Catholic minority in Northern Ireland.

POWER STRUGGLE

O'Neill's departure in the wake of renewed civil rights violence last week climaxed a long power struggle in the Protestant-based Unionist party. The party, allied with Britain's Conservatives, has governed Northern Ireland for nearly 50 years.

In his resignation statement, O'Neill, 54, a former captain of the elite Irish Guards, said he was quitting to serve "the cause of reform," hoping that the next prime minister would not be hampered "by personal animosities." He pledged to support any new leader fully committed to Roman Catholic-Protestant equality.

Apparent favorite to succeed O'Neill is Brian Faulkner, for

De Gaulle Leaves France 'to Destiny'

Canadian Hopes Rising

Quebec Sees No Change

From CP, UPI

OTTAWA—Hope that relations between France and Canada will improve now that President Charles de Gaulle has resigned was expressed Monday by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp.

However, in Quebec, a spokesman for the province said the agreements that have led to booming Franco-Quebec co-operation "are between France and Quebec, not between de Gaulle and a Quebec premier."

"There are firm engagements, as far as the content and operation of the agreements are concerned, for years to come," he added.

Prime Minister Trudeau's comment was much more indirect. When David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich) asked if he had sent a telegram of sympathy to de Gaulle, Trudeau replied: "I know those in political life know the life of a politician is a bit ephemeral and I think the general's surprise was no greater than my own."

'Unnecessary Way'

Conservative House leader Gerald Baldwin then caused loud laughter by asking if Ottawa has received a message of condolence from France concerning the resignation of Transport Minister Paul Hellyer.

Sharp said outside the Commons that "it seemed to us (the government) that from time to time, Gen. de Gaulle took measures that didn't promote good relations between Canada and France."

"In fact, these moves interfered with those good relations in quite an unnecessary way."

Sharp hoped there would be "an orderly change" as France votes for a new president. He said Canada is anxious to co-operate with France, especially as it relates to Canada's French-speaking citizens.

"We have had difficulties (with France) in the past and I hope these can be reduced in the future," he said.

The Quebec spokesman said Franco-Quebec relations are likely to continue to blossom even if Franco-Canadian relations improve.

"Even if there are good relations with all of Canada," he said, "Don't forget that 90 per cent of France's relations here will be with Quebec."

The Quebec spokesman and sources in Ottawa agreed the outlook is for a probable return to the relatively happy state of Franco-Canadian relations before de Gaulle's "vive le Quebec libre" speech in Montreal in July, 1967.

In Paris, an official of interim president Alain Poher's political party, the Democratic Centre, said it favors continued bonds between France and French Canada but without any "irritation" of Ottawa-Quebec relations.

The party, which sharply criticized former president de Gaulle for his "Quebec libre" speech in Montreal two years ago, wants to cut any excessive expenditure by de Gaulle on "prestige" projects.

But the official added in an interview that the Democratic Centre also favors good relations with "those who are our cousins"—meaning French-speaking Canadians.

Poher could be a top candidate for a regular term as president when Frenchmen elect a new chief of state a few weeks from now.

Meanwhile, slight relaxation in the Gaullist grip on French foreign policy could be signified by the resignation Monday of Gaullist MP Jacques Vendroux,

Poher Leads Until Vote

PARIS (AP)—Alain Poher received the powers of the presidency of Charles de Gaulle's Fifth Republic without ceremony Monday, but his only major task is to set up a presidential election.

De Gaulle remained behind the green iron gates of his country estate at Colombey-les-Deux-Églises in eastern France, where the tolling of the church clock at noon marked the end of his 10 years of power.

Noon was the hour de Gaulle himself had selected for leaving France "to its destiny."

His resignation, the result of a sharp defeat in a referendum calling for decentralization of power and Senate reform, stirred up all kinds of guessing in Europe and around the world.

GOLD FLURRY

Gold and currency markets encountered a new flurry of trading. The French franc hit new lows and gold new highs in Paris, underscoring the uncertainty some felt about the French economy without de Gaulle.

The British looked with renewed hope for joining the European Common Market. The West Germans and others foresaw the possibility of a more flexible France and European political unity.

ISRAELI HOPEFUL

De Gaulle kept Britain out of the Common Market and sought for France the leading role among European countries. Israelis expressed a hope for a change in what they regarded as de Gaulle's pro-Arab policies, and the Arabs considered they had lost a friend.

At the Elysee Palace here, se-

20 Words And Why

Charles de Gaulle used only 20 words to resign as president of France:

"I am ceasing the exercise of my functions as president of the Republic. This decision takes effect at noon today."

He did so because of this vote on his complex referendum to change the constitution:

Yes—10,892,169, or 47.6 per cent; No—11,889,559, or 52.4 per cent.

Registered voters—29,353,857; turnout 22,881,728, or 78 per cent.

English-Speaking Fears Exaggerated in Quebec

By DOMINIQUE OLIFT
and PETER REGENSTRIEF

Third of a series

English-speaking people in Quebec are uneasy.

They watch the surging tide of French-Canadian nationalism and worry about the future of their language.

They fear the day may come when French may be proclaimed the only official language in Quebec and the use of English shunned in the schools, the stores, the offices and factories of their province.

But what do French-speaking Quebecers think of the idea of turning the province into a unilingual state where French would again be the paramount language it was before the British conquest of 1763?

At this point, the majority aren't impressed.

Fewer than one-third of French-speaking people in Quebec—30 per cent—favor a "French-only" policy. Even fewer—21 per cent—believe it would be fair. And fewer still—23 per cent—feel it would be practical.

But the sense of identity with French-speaking people outside Quebec remains strong. Sixty per cent believe Quebec has a special responsibility to protect the culture of French-Canadians living in other provinces. And more than 75 per cent would like Quebec to have a special—but not too close—relationship with France.

These are some of the attitudes disclosed in a telephone poll of 428 French-

Tremor in California Too Little, Too Late?

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — California, where doomsayers have been predicting a fall-into-the-sea earthquake this month, was rocked by a fairly severe tremor for about a minute Monday afternoon. Large areas swayed in Los Angeles but damage was minor and no one was hurt. The quake centre was in the southern California desert.

Benson Tables Wide Reforms

Life-Firms Tax Unveiled

OTTAWA (CP) — Revised proposals for taxing life insurance companies, and the policyholders who make profits on their investment in them, were tabled in the Commons Monday by Finance Minister Edgar Benson.

In a nutshell, the taxes will be:

● Normal corporation profit taxes of 52 per cent on the normal net income of life insurance companies after allowing for deductible business expenses.

● A special flat-rate tax of 15 per cent on the profits of insurance company investments which flow through the companies to the policyholders, to be paid by the companies. These flow-through investment profits will not be counted as normal insurance company profits.

● Normal personal income taxes, which vary according to a person's taxable income, on any proceeds a policyholder gets in excess of cost when he cashes in a policy before death. But the companies will be relieved of this amount of tax in order to avoid duplication.

● Where a policy includes an amount to be segregated and invested apart from insurance in a pooled fund, as in an unincorporated mutual fund, the earnings to the policyholder—interest and dividends, but not capital gains—will have to be declared as personal income by the policyholder and taxed.

An important feature of Benson's revised proposal is that the taxes on policyholders will not apply until 1970, to provide time for working out the administrative machinery. The insurance companies, however, will have to pay the full amount of investment tax until then.

Benson first proposed taxing the life insurance companies in his Oct. 22 budget last year.

Essentially, the life insurance companies were to be taxed, according to the budget last fall, in the same way as other business activity—that is, on their profits after allowable expense deductions from gross income.

In the case of insurance companies, however, special rules had to be evolved defining life insurance profits. The new resolution also proposes taxing the Canadian income of non-Canadian general insurance companies in the same way that other non-Canadian corporations pay taxes on their branch operations in Canada.

Extension Ruled Out For Income Returns

OTTAWA (CP) — Revenue Minister Jean-Pierre Cote rejected a suggestion in the Commons Monday that the deadline for filing personal income tax statements be extended to Monday, May 5, from midnight Thursday night. A Conservative MP urged such action because of the Air Canada strike and troubles in the mail delivery system.

But New Minister Launched Soon

Hellyer Sinks with Barely a Ripple

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has treated the resignation of his transport minister so coolly that the political waters seem to have closed over Paul Hellyer's head with scarcely a ripple.

Informants said Monday that the prime minister had not yet concentrated on appointment of a successor to his chief cabinet lieutenant, whose resignation takes effect Wednesday.

Seasoned political observers said Trudeau will make as few cabinet changes as possible at this time—the minimum would be one—so as not to give the slightest impression that Hellyer's resignation had caused any panic in the administration.

The observers said they could not recall when the resignation of such a senior minister had created so little fuss—far the time being at least.

However, Hellyer has said he disputes what he calls

Trudeau's soft-on-the-provinces version of federalism and has indicated that he will speak out publicly on the issue.

Consequently, it is extremely likely that both Trudeau and Hellyer will have further and tougher exchanges than the minister's letter of resignation last Thursday and Trudeau's quick acceptance of it.

Despite his public shrug about Hellyer's defection, the prime minister reacted sharply on the issue of housing, one avowed cause of the split.

Informants said the cabinet earlier had rejected a proposal that National Housing Act mortgages on existing homes be raised to $18,000 from $10,000.

But Trudeau announced such a move Friday.

The prime minister's simplest cabinet move now would be to appoint a minister without portfolio or back-bencher to the transport job. That would be the only move he would have to make.

If he appoints a minister with portfolio to the job—the name of Supply Minister Don Jamieson has been mentioned—he would have to make a second cabinet move.

Whatever he does, Trudeau is expected to give the matter attention today and to act fairly quickly.

The reason is that he has announced that proposed NHA amendments will be introduced soon and he will need a minister to pilot this legislation through the Commons.

President Killed

Dead Hero Mourned By Bolivia

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI)—Bolivians turned out by the thousands Monday to pay final tribute to their president, René Barrientos, 49, killed in a helicopter crash Sunday. His successor pledged continuation of his pro-U.S. policies.

The body of the president in a flag-draped coffin was flown to La Paz from Cochabamba, the tin mining centre in the interior where the crash occurred, in a Bolivian Air Force transport. Atop the coffin were Barrientos' jaunty air force cap, his sword of office and a single wreath of roses.

Awaiting the arrival of the body at the airport in the hills above La Paz were Acting President Luis Adolfo Siles.

Space Unit By 1975?

WASHINGTON (AP)—The space agency asked Monday for design and planning studies leading to development of a 12-man earth orbital space station by 1975.

The station would be the first element of a 50-man space base to be made up of specialized modules assembled in earth orbit in the late 1970s and early 1980s, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

The space stations, designed for an operational life of 10 years, would be resupplied with expendable materials and with rotation crews by logistic vehicles, also to be included in the design studies.

NASA said it will consider using modified Apollo and Gemini spacecraft as the initial logistic vehicles if an advanced space shuttle is not available for the early phase of space station operations.

Each shuttle concept will be based on landing at earth ports, rather than using the water recovery techniques of present U.S. manned space flight programs.

members of his cabinet and officials of the armed forces. Although the airport is only eight miles from the city, it took the funeral cortege more than two hours to wind its way down mountain slopes into sprawling La Paz.

Thousands lined the road and other thousands awaited the arrival of the body in the capital's Murillo Square where the metropolitan cathedral and presidential palace are located.

Honor guards from the military academy and the air force, which Barrientos once commanded, stood at attention in the cathedral where the body will lay in state until Thursday.

Siles, in his first official act as president — he had been Barrientos' vice-president since 1966 — posthumously proclaimed Barrientos a national hero and ordered 30 days of mourning, including three days of total suspension of all activities.

Expressions of grief poured in from throughout the Western Hemisphere, including a message from President Nixon praising Barrientos as a "dynamic leader" who left "a lasting legacy for all his fellow Americans ...

"Bolivia can be justly proud of his leadership and his life."

IN EFFECT

Severe precautionary measures were in effect throughout La Paz to forestall any disorders. Siles visited military bases in the capital and around the city and called on the citizenry to respect Barrientos' memory by keeping the peace.

A mass at city hall in Cochabamba preceded dispatch of the body to La Paz. The body will be returned to Cochabamba Thursday and will lay in state at the cathedral overnight prior to burial at Barrientos' home nearby Friday.

FORMER PROFESSOR

Siles, in a national broadcast, pledged a continuation of Barrientos' policy of friendship to the United States and his defence of democratic institutions.

Siles, 43, a lawyer and former university professor, is the son of one former Bolivian president and the brother of another. He has been acting president on five occasions since 1966 when Barrientos left the country for state visits.

Agitators Force Italian Move

MILAN, Italy (AP)—The University of Milan closed five of its colleges until May 5. The decision came after the student agitators prevented Prof. Pietro Trimarchi from holding classes four times in the last 10 days. Trimarchi, a professor of law, punished a student earlier this year and since then he has been the target of insults, spitting and threats.

Chairman looks happy

Dubcek Demotion 'Harmony Move'

PRAGUE (UPI) — Alexander Dubcek was elected Monday to the relatively minor post of chairman of the Czechoslovak federal parliament, 11 days after his fall from leadership of the Communist party. He said he decided to step down from the top job as a harmony move with the Soviets.

Dubcek, appearing calm and relaxed, asked in his acceptance speech that the parliament support his successor, Gustav Husak, who has returned orthodox Communism to this nation.

Dubcek said he had suggested the change in leadership and declared he supported his fall from power after a 15-month attempt to instal "socialism with a human face" in Czechoslovakia.

"The reason for the (leadership) changes is to form a party and state leadership to secure normalization of society and of our relations with our allies and above all the Soviet Union — to which I want to contribute further by my work," Dubcek said.

Mines Take Toll

Arab, Israeli Guns Blaze

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Mines killed one Israeli and wounded 24 others in separate blasts east of the Sea of Galilee and near the Suez Canal Monday while Arab and Israeli gunners exchanged fire across the Jordan River.

An Israeli laborer was killed and 21 wounded when a bus hit an explosive charge alongside the Yarmuk River east of the Sea of Galilee.

THREE WOUNDED

Three Israeli soldiers were wounded when their army vehicle ran over a mine northeast of El Qantara, northernmost Israeli-held town on the Suez Canal, the Israeli army announced.

Mortar fire broke out between Israelis and Arabs across the Jordan River near where the laborer was killed by the mine blast. Settlers ducked into shelters when the fighting erupted. No casualties were reported.

New Link Ties Calgary, Coast

CALGARY (CP)—Jet service between Calgary and Vancouver with stops at several British Columbia interior points, has been started by Pacific Western Airlines, ending 20 years of service by DC6 piston-engined aircraft.

The new service will provide one flight from Vancouver to Calgary each day. Three flights a week will land at Penticton, four at Kelowna. Stops will also be made at Cranbrook.

Rebels Warn Lebanon

By UPI

The Al Fatah commandos threatened Monday to divert resources from the guerrilla struggle against Israel and fight the Lebanese army, which pressed its efforts to Control Lebanon's pro-commando movement. Al Fatah radio in Cairo expressed anger over the fact that Lebanon used its security forces last week to quell rioting by demonstrators demanding a free reign for Lebanese-based commandos to attack Israel. Seventeen persons were killed, more than 100 injured and the government of Premier Rashid Karami toppled in the controversy.

"All indications are that the situation is approaching the point of danger and that ambitious Lebanese army commanders want to assume power to deliver a blow," Al Fatah's broadcast said.

which the army has ruled Lebanon for five days ended there Monday, but there was mounting speculation that the army may step back in to resolve the continuing political crisis.

President Charles Helou continued consultations with political leaders in a bid to form a coalition government with an agreed national policy whether to allow Palestinian guerrilla activity on Lebanese soil.

A curfew clamped on Beirut and five other major cities to stamp out demonstrations against government restrictions on guerrilla activity was further relaxed. It will be enforced only from 9 p.m. to 7 a.m.

Premier Rashid Karami resigned last Thursday after bloody clashes between the army and demonstrators. The clashes left 17 dead and nearly 100 wounded. Though most politicians here approve the principle of guerrilla action, they are reluctant to risk tough Israeli reprisals, against Lebanon.

De Gaulle Departs

THE STRATEGY HE HAD USED so frequently and so effectively to sway the French people and confound his enemies failed the old general on Sunday.

As soon as he knew that his direct appeal to the electorate had been rebuffed, that the referendum which he himself had made into a vote of confidence had been defeated by more than a million votes, General Charles de Gaulle surrendered the presidency.

His defeat and his departure, he predicted, would plunge the nation into the sort of chaos it experienced last May during the student riots, and the massive strike action which won huge wage concessions and badly damaged the economy. He may be correct; but there is no immediate sign of crisis of that nature, only uncertainty and a shifting political alignment the outcome of which it is impossible to foresee.

Until a new president is chosen — probably within the next thirty days — President of the Senate Alain Poher assumes the duties of head of state. But it is unlikely there will be any visible trends of national policy until he or some other aspirant is confirmed in the presidency.

It may be there will be a call for elections of a new National Assembly, and in that case it may be months before there emerges any substantial policy change.

Naturally there is widespread speculation abroad as to what decisions ultimately will be taken in such areas as the future French attitude to Great Britain's long-frustrated hopes of entering the Common Market, consistently vetoed by General de Gaulle. There is a possibility of a change in official attitudes towards the Arab states and a resumption of the supply of arms to Israel. There are suggestions that there may be closer relations with the United States and wider co-operation with the NATO nations.

On the other hand, Communist parties in Europe see the defeat of the general as a significant gain for themselves.

In Moscow the official interpretation is that "the result of the referendum is a great victory for the Communist party."

It is too soon to tell. But what is obvious is that there were serious defections within the ranks of the followers of the general, when such men as Valéry Giscard d'Estaing turned against him and the man generally assumed to be in line for succession, Georges Pompidou, was rather less than warm in his reaction to the referendum.

It was the loss of support as represented here, perhaps due to an unpalatable ultimatum, as much as to any swing to the radical Left that brought the downfall of the old soldier.

But however he may have been criticized for his arrogance, for diplomatic improprieties, for ruthlessness and political intrigue, no one will doubt that he has been motivated throughout his turbulent career by a deep love for and pride in his country. He is first of all a Frenchman and a patriot. These qualities were once esteemed in leadership by his people.

Chamber Stand

WHEN MAYOR STEPHEN told the Victoria Chamber of Commerce Friday that its job was to sell the proposed CPR convention centre to the public, he may have forgotten that just over a year ago the local chamber clearly defined its belief that "any guaranteed subsidy for operation or capital funds for construction (of a convention centre) should be the responsibility of the business community."

This statement of position was presented in February, 1968, by the chamber before a municipal symposium held at the University of Victoria to discuss various aspects of Victoria's economic potential. Though the chamber agreed that a convention centre was a priority project it did not support the proposition that city ratepayers should pay for it.

As the planned convention centre as presented by the CPR last week will cost the city a minimum of $2,400,000 it would seem obvious that the chamber must find out how Mayor Stephen and his council intend raising this amount of money as well as how they will meet its additional and continuing annual costs.

If the chamber sticks to its guns it can only recommend the building of the CPR convention centre if it is financed solely by the business community and not by the ratepayers at large.

Which could mean a very substantial increase in business tax.

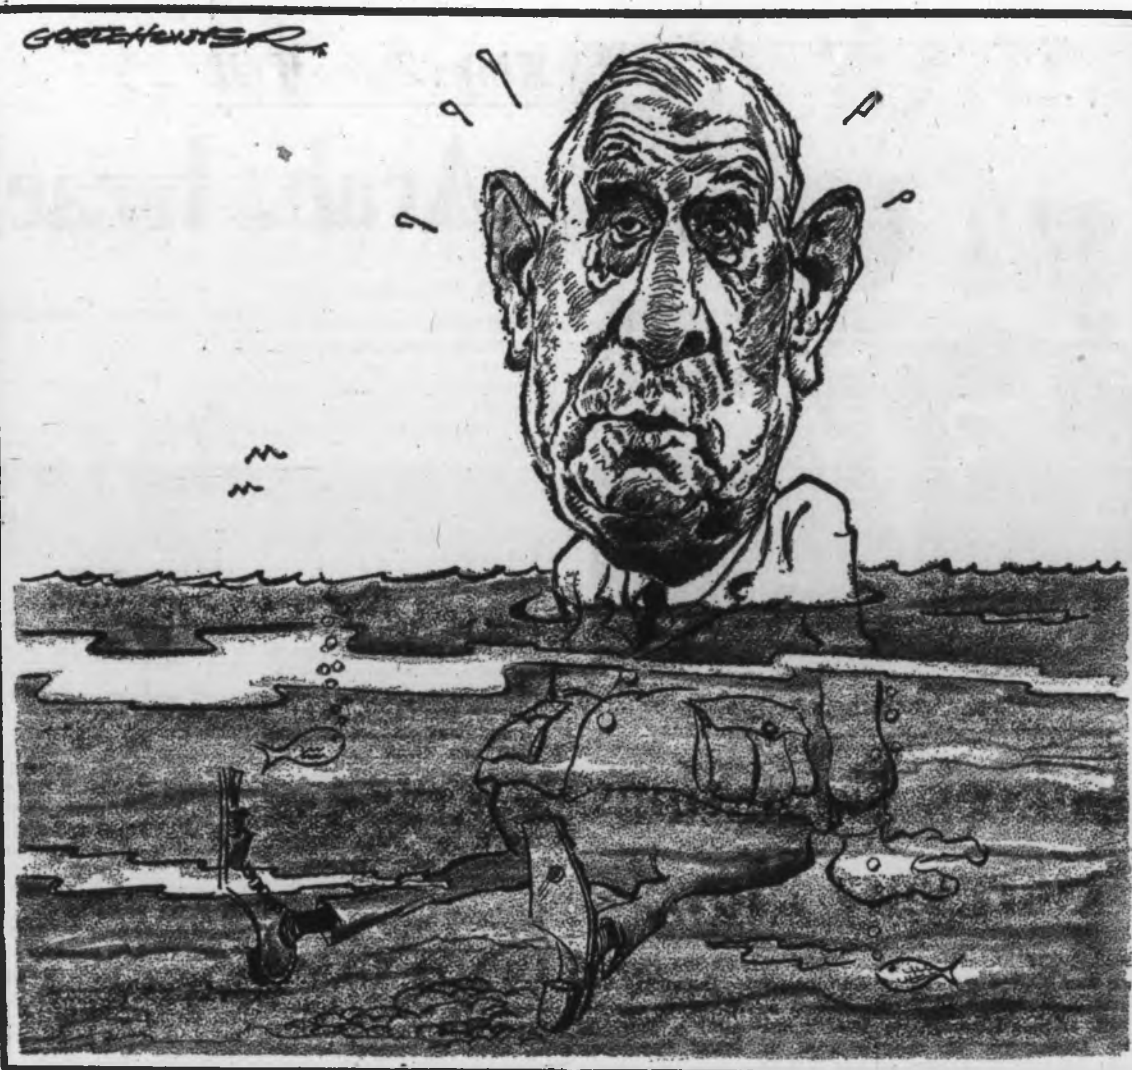

Telescope Hope

THE AGREEMENT of the federal government to turn over to astronomers of a group of western universities some of the main assets of the cancelled Queen Elizabeth II telescope project is commendable. It was a sad day for Canadian astronomy—and for Canadian scientific endeavor in general—when the government decided to abandon the $22,000,000 observatory planned for Mount Kobau in the south Okanagan. But the decision to give a consortium of the universities the chief existing elements of the program and to keep the Mount Kobau site for future astronomical developments provides new hope.

It is a rather tenuous hope, to be sure. The universities, in Alberta and British Columbia, will receive the design plans, the underground "blank" of the 157-inch mirror, the second largest in the world, and the grinding machine to be used to finish it. But to proceed with the construction of the telescope and observatory they will need $10,000,000, which, forming a corporate entity, they will have to seek privately.

The sum is large. And time is in some ways an enemy. The cost of almost everything rises. There is also the possibility that the original design team for the telescope, whose services are now available to the consortium if it goes ahead, may lose key members to employment in the United States.

But one can scarcely believe that the response to an appeal for funds for this purpose—to enhance Canada's reputation in the scientific world, to provide an excellent facility for Canadian students, and to restore the honor which the observatory was to have paid to the Queen—will be less than generous. The first pledge of support might very aptly, and very popularly, come from British Columbia's provincial government.

Shocking Waste of Canadian Public Money Leaves Commons Helpless or Indifferent

THE House of Commons currently is going through the motions of tracking down the Tax Wasters.

This exercise involves the assigning of the public accounts committee to a combing through of Auditor General Maxwell Henderson's latest financial horror story.

It's his annual report, a fact-and-figures expose of federal fiscal frivolity that aptly could be entitled "How to Lose a Million."

Or who knows, perhaps even a billion!

The performance has become as stylized as a folk dance.

The auditor general blows the whistle on the waste-makers.

The public accounts committee goes gum-shoeing after the extravagance-creators.

Witnesses are called, documents examined, the committee files a report with the Commons.

And nothing happens.

It's little more than a ritual charade.

For about all it does is create the reassuring illusion for the taxpayers that somebody down here cares.

The auditor general, the Commons, the public accounts committee, and the money-pinched federal government itself all may care.

But the only thing that happens is that instances of waste and extravagance and of terrifying incompetence pack a greater shock impact each year.

Now get this: The auditor general's immense list of case histories of waste and extravagance — it currently runs a record 211 items — is a catalogue of unauthorized, possibly illegal government spending.

It represents spending where somebody blundered, or deliberately stretched or even broke the law, or departmental regulations, with or without the knowledge of his superior officers in the civil service.

But did you ever hear of anyone being reprimanded, much less suspended or dismissed?

Let's skim some of the auditor general's 211 items for samples of official error, indifference or even defiance of rules controlling government spending.

Item 199: "Error resulted in the order of 30 electronic tubes costing $12,000 for which there was no demand while the tubes actually required were available at $1.33 each."

Item 210: "Civil servant subsequently retired (without penalty on pension) incurred long distance calls costing $4,900 that could not be identified with departmental business."

Item 201: "Loss on unoccupied apartment building rented for $67,345.00."

Item 63: "Cost of unoccupied hotel space booked for CBC, $148,000; while corporation employees were using other accommodation costing $40,000." (This was a CBC move of a similar waste a year earlier.)

Item 178: "Cost of abandoned plans for National Museum $753,000." (This happened in Ottawa, but it was duplicated, and in some instances far exceeded in other parts of the country.)

The cost of this sort of nonsense, in 57 of the 211 cases listed by the auditor general, ran to $12,777,000.

But that could be but a drop in the waste bucket.

For there were other cases of reckless disregard for the tax dollar such as the estimating of the cost of the National Arts Centre in Ottawa at just over $8 million when, by the time the place opens next month, the bill will read something close to $50 million.

Why does nothing scarcely ever happen about this sort of spending? Why is it permitted to go on and on and on?

Indifference to treasury board's directives coupled with delay in compelling compliance is one explanation.

As an illustration, consider item 121:

"The use of defence department oars for the purposes of armed forces dependents' recreation and shopping, contrary to treasury board rulings, continues. The special study of the use of staff cars and chauffeurs, begun in 1966, is still incomplete. Cars and chauffeurs continue to be assigned to senior officers for their use, including transportation between home and the office."

Because the increasingly undisciplined spending habits of the civil service, crown corporations, and federal agencies are getting out of control, through sheer bigness.

In just six years, 43,000 have been added to the federal staff which currently approaches 400,000, with the cost of government overhead zooming 76 per cent to just short of $2 billion." (Colonist Ottawa Bureau)

Apparatus for Revolution Was Meant to Rule World

By ERNST KUX in The Neue Zürcher Zeitung

If the spectre of communism has ever haunted Europe and the world, as Marx predicted it would, then it was in the form of the Comintern. No other world-wide organization in our century has gained as many members and supporters, awakened as many hopes, left behind as many disappointments and confounded up as many fears and anxieties as the Third Communist International, founded just 50 years ago.

The Comintern was everything that its leaders and members proclaimed it to be: command centre of international revolution, a worldwide secular ministry from which the dismembered and dispossessed of this world expected their salvation and in whose service they sacrificed themselves.

But the Comintern also was and did everything of which its opponents accused it: it used force and subversion to ignite world revolution, to topple governments and overthrow nations; it financed and directed foreign Communist parties, forming a world-spanning network of underground cells, front organizations and fifth columns, and it used both legal and illegal means to gain its ends, including gangster methods ranging from blackmail to robbery and murder — as has been amply proven by secret documents and the revelations of former Comintern officials.

More feared than effectual, the Third Communist International failed to attain any of its goals; it neither carried world revolution to other countries and continents, nor did it effect an extensive union of the proletarians of all nations. Its only success was negative: the splitting and shredding of the socialist, trade union and progressive movements of the left, which would not accept the Comintern's claim to leadership nor its totalitarian ideology.

The main battle of the Comintern was fought not so much against "capitalism" and "imperialism" as against the Second International of European Social Democracy, the liberal reform parties in the western democracies, the trade unions of the industrialized nations and the national liberation movements of the Third World.

The weakening of these groups contributed more than a little to the rise of fascism during the first post-war period. Demonically exaggerated, the activities of the Comintern served as a spur and justification for fascist counter-movements.

The "anti-fascism" of the Comintern and the "anti-communism" of the fascists were fundamentally related in their totalitarian spirit, strange bed-fellows in their ruthlessly militant actions. The illumination of this relationship by the 1939 pact between Stalin and Hitler marked the end of the third attempt to topple the bourgeois and realize Marx's dictum: "Workers of the world, unite!"

The founding conference of the Third International met in the Kremlin on March 2-6, 1919. Stenographic records show participation by 51 delegates from 19 countries.

Only a few prominent foreigners had accepted the Bolshevik invitation. They had been deterred not only by transportation difficulties and the civil war raging in Russia but also by mistrust of Lenin's intentions.

The Bolshevik leaders Lenin, Trotsky, Bukharin and Sinoviev dominated the First Comintern Congress with their brilliant and impassioned speeches; the manifesto written by Trotsky called for world revolution and support of the new Soviet state.

The times seemed to favor Lenin. The collapse of the Central Powers and the outcome of the First World War had created a revolutionary situation in Europe's industrialized countries; the nationally oriented socialist leaders and parties were compromised and the success of Russia's October Revolution had made a lasting impression on the masses of hungry workers and returning soldiers. Lenin expected the momentary outbreak of world revolution and confidently predicted that Europe would turn Communist within a year. These hopes seemed about to be fulfilled: Hungary became a Soviet Republic in March 1919; and Bavaria shortly thereafter; the Communists scored more than 2 million votes in Italian elections; there were general strikes in Switzerland and Czechoslovakia, and in Germany everything seemed to point to a Communist takeover.

In an optimistic mood 167 delegates met for the Second Comintern Congress in July-August 1920 in Petersburg and Moscow, where they set down the notorious "21 Conditions" which provided the guidelines for a centrally directed, hierarchically structured organization.

While Marx had founded the First International as a loose federation of fully equal members, Lenin established the Third International around an apparatus which was not only conspiratorial but militarily disciplined. European Communist parties which had been founded or had split off from other Left-wing groups became sections of the Comintern and subject to the commands of its executive committee, which functioned as the "general staff of world revolution" and was dominated by the Russian Bolsheviks.

Lenin defined the aims and tasks of the Comintern as subversion, revolution and the establishment of a proletarian dictatorship. After the Communists failed to grab power in Germany an effort was made to lend new impetus to the revolutionary movement by using the Red Army as its pacemaker; in 1920 Soviet troops marched into Poland, but were thrown back at the Vistula. After a few weeks of rule by force the Soviet republics in Hungary and Bavaria were overthrown. The controversy raging around the Comintern's "21 Conditions" had led to a split among the major socialist parties of Western Europe, a fact which Mussolini was able to exploit in grabbing power for his fascist movement.

The world revolution failed to materialize. The Soviet Union saw itself isolated, with the rule of socialism confined to one land.

Stalin's battle for one-man rule in the Soviet Union led to the complete emasculation of the Comintern, which Stalin once disparagingly compared to a "junk shop."

The Comintern apparatus became an instrument of the Soviet secret police and of military espionage. The Communist parties of the world bowed to Stalin's formula, according to which class consciousness and loyalty to the party line were determined by the degree of support for the Soviet Union, thus making "Muscovites" of all Communists.

Following Hitler's rise to power the Seventh Comintern Congress in 1935 altered course and adopted the tactic of the "Popular Front," which brought a brief renaissance under the aegis of "anti-fascism." But at the same time Stalin began his great purges and the liquidation of foreign party leaders and Comintern functionaries and the organs of persecution against deviationists in the Spanish Civil War increasingly paralyzed Communist front organizations and brought about the disintegration of many parties.

Stalin's pact with Hitler in August, 1939, dealt the death blow to the already moribund Comintern. Its official dissolution was announced by Stalin on May 22, 1943, as a gesture to Roosevelt and Churchill. All that was still functioning and useable of the gigantic Comintern apparatus, such as archives, underground networks and dummy companies, were taken over by the "International Department" of the Soviet Central Committee.

In U.S. Universities

Rebellious Students Face Stern Reaction

By NORA BELOFF from Washington

ALTHOUGH student rebels have successfully reduced Harvard, the United States' most famous university, to a state of chaos, the tide of opinion is running strongly against them.

When I visited Harvard on the eve of the takeover of the University Hall, I found young militants defiantly aware of rising hostility. A week later, at the State University of Colorado, in the heartland of America, where over 100 academics from all over the United States are participating in a conference of world affairs, the swing to the Right is already under way.

The cautious liberal president of Colorado University, Mr. Joseph P. Smiley, who antagonized some of his Right-wing governors by allowing the revolutionary Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) to use campus premises for their national convention, has been pressured into resigning. He will leave at the end of this academic year.

Further, two of the SDS ring leaders, who had been warned after their first use of physical violence — to prevent the Central Intelligence Agency from recruiting on the campus — were expelled when they organized a second riot, against a visiting Right-wing politician. No one went on strike to defend them.

At Harvard I spent an evening with some of the young rebels, trying to find out what they hoped to get from an agitation which they themselves expected would provoke police action and lead to their expulsion from the university, and presumably from a chance for a degree — the passport here to all good jobs.

The three who volunteered to talk, all of whom later actively participated in occupying University Hall, were very different from the unkempt, barefoot Bohemians I had expected. None wore beards. None took drugs, not even marijuana. Like their mentors, Mao of China and Castro of Cuba, they advocated total dedication to the revolutionary cause.

One was a handsome, blue-eyed youngster, proud of his Marxist-Leninist philosophy, in the familiar state of revolt against his middle-class parents. The second was a visiting student from Pakistan, with a pale, sensitive face framed by long black hair; who was quietly sceptical about the time it would take — a generation, he guessed — to arouse American youth. The third was a large, domineering Irish-American of working-class background, with thick brown moustaches, who was eager to organize the poor and utterly contemptuous of the "do good" liberals and academic freedoms of which Harvard University has long been the chief stronghold.

Their underlying purpose, they said, was to pursue and publicize the struggle against the American acquisitive society. Two specific issues selected for this particular riot were to be the demand for the expulsion of the military officer training course from Harvard premises and the replacement of plans to extend university buildings in favor of building low-rent housing for students and the poor. The two issues were intended to exploit anti-militarist and anti-poverty feelings which would bring support and sympathy from the vast majority of non-SDS students.

Within the SDS, however, they told me there are now sharp divisions. On the one side, now in retreat, are the happy-go-lucky successors of the French 1968 revolutionaries; they are ardent internationalists, advocating making love rather than war, and are now opposed by the more serious and more puritanical school of agitators.

The split centred on the two key issues confronting the whole American Left: the Vietnam war and the Negro.

On the war, the "Oh no, we won't go" leaders had advocated burning draft cards and refusing enlistment. The young men I spoke to felt this was including middle-class private consciences whereas the really useful thing for Left-winners to do was to get into the army and organize mutiny from within.

On racism, earlier leaders had deplored the new modelism from Black Power people who say "black is beautiful" and imply that white is ugly. They urged fraternity regardless of color. The new faction in control feel the Black Power violence can valuable contribute to the breakdown of the American social structure, and should be encouraged as a factor in class war. Interned later there had been a stand-up row between the two factions at a recent council meeting of the SDS in Texas, and the hardliners had won overwhelmingly.

But although the SDS is divided against itself and, even if it would represent less than 10 per cent of the American student community, events at Harvard have shown that in the short term it can still paralyze the strongest university.

Charlie Explains Trudeau Thought

By FRANK LOWE

AFTER reading the latest news about what Canada was doing in NATO, it seemed to me last night that this would be an appropriate time to visit my neighbor, Charlie, U.S. see, Charlie is still running a high fever after last year's attack of Trudeauomania and as a result can always explain what is going on in Ottawa these somewhat confusing days.

Charlie, in fact, usually doesn't have to be asked to explain the latest moves. For instance, about three o'clock one morning last winter my phone rang, it was Charlie.

"Frank," he said, "I'm sorry I got you out of bed but I had to explain that the prime minister doesn't think you are a crumb. So don't take it personally."

I explained to Charlie that as the prime minister didn't know me at all, he couldn't very well know whether or not I was a crumb. And at that hour in the morning, I really couldn't care less.

"Well," said Charlie, "I didn't want you to read about it or hear about it in the morning and misunderstand. The prime minister only meant that some newspapermen were crumbs. But he didn't say a word about you."

I finally found out that Charlie had gotten wind of the London press conference at which the prime minister gave vent to his feelings about the news. And he wanted to make sure I didn't feel badly about this when I got the news.

Good old Charlie — a real, good neighbor.

Lately, of course, Charlie has been very busy exulting about the new jumbo jet airport deal. Up to this point he had been smarting a bit about my attitude towards the prime minister. It seems, in a moment of pique about some particularly obscure statement he had made, I had referred to Mr. Trudeau as "a swinging Mackenzie King."

So when the airport decision came along Charlie was a bundle of happiness.

"When this prime minister makes a decision," he chortled, "he sticks to it. Nobody pushes him around. No sir."

He had been so busy gloating, in fact, that he had failed to fill me in on what was happening with this NATO business. So I barked myself over to his place last night and admitted my puzzlement.

I explained quite frankly that I couldn't understand how the prime minister could say we were planning on trimming our NATO commitment, and then have his defence minister announce we were beefing up this commitment.

Charlie professed to be amazed at my obtuseness. So I told him that when NATO forces from two battalions to two brigades, this meant that we were talking about a heck of a lot more soldiers.

"A brigade," I pointed out, "is much larger than a battalion."

"So that's what has you puzzled," Charlie chorled. "Dear boy, you are still trapped in Second World War thinking. You aren't thinking today."

I somewhat sullenly opined that even today a brigade was a brigade was a brigade.

Charlie gave me one of those superior smiles he has specialized in ever since Trudeau romped to victory last summer and said:

"That's where you're wrong. A brigade is not what it used to be."

While I was pondering this, Charlie asked:

"What was a dollar worth in the Second World War?"

"A buck," I replied.

"And today?" Charlie bared in. "Today, what is a dollar worth?"

"About 30 cents," I estimated.

"Right," Charlie shouted. "Perfectly right. See what I mean when I say you are trapped in Second World War thinking?"

I told him I hadn't the faintest idea of what he was talking about.

"It's inflation," Charlie said. "We still call a dollar a dollar. But it isn't a dollar."

"It is just like a brigade. A brigade today is not worth what a brigade was in the Second World War. So when the defence minister talks about a brigade he is really right in step with the prime minister's plan to trim NATO."

"Simple, isn't it?"

"I sure is, Charlie," I said. "I don't know what I would do without you."

De Gaulle's Exit Renews Fears Of European Currency Crisis

BACKGROUND

Carefully guarded expressions of optimism that the way to European unity would be easier now that Charles de Gaulle has resigned were overshadowed here Monday by renewed fears of a European currency crisis.

The West German Bundesbank, guardian of Europe's most stable currency, stepped in to support the U.S. dollar, which was weakened by a run to dump francs and British pounds. The psychological pressure was increased by a report from the highly respected Economic Research Institute saying that an evaluation of the mark was "unavoidable."

The indications were that West Germany and Europe will face a new currency crisis similar to the run last fall which precipitated a 10-nation emergency conference in Bonn. That conference was marked by West Germany's resistance to revalue the mark upwards, and by de Gaulle's equal determination not to devalue the franc. Stoppag measures, taken at the time to try to restore balance to European payments, are not working. Economic indicators here have shown that the German industrial and export boom continues.

"Revaluation of the mark is a certainty," a high industrial and financial authority in

By JOE ALEX MORRIS, from Bonn

Cologne said. "The only question is when."

The expert was inclined to think not before a new French president is elected — in the next 35 days. But not long thereafter, he stressed.

"The new French government will be more prepared to take corrective measures (i.e., devalue)," he said.

The Bundesbank set new rates three times Monday to discourage persons trying to buy marks.

Bundesbank's president Karl Blessing announced that the issue banks of the European Community countries and the "club of 10" were standing "firm and decidedly behind the French franc."

In an apparent attempt to stop a money panic, Blessing said he saw no "immediate" danger of a devaluation of the franc — so long as the French do not lose their heads.

A government spokesman here said the Bundesbank was ready to prevent a flight of "hot money" into the country.

Meanwhile, political reaction to de Gaulle's departure was carefully tempered. Politicians observed de Gaulle's services to Franco-German friendship, but there was some deviation on what the future will bring.

The news of an impending revaluation of the mark came from the German Economic Research Institute in its spring report on the state of economy. It said that despite measures to dampen West Germany's $4.5 billion trade surplus last year, the country was still experiencing a "strong growth in exports and in the trade balance."

The institute saw only one real solution: a new international agreement readjusting currency rates. Present measures have only postponed the day of reckoning, it added.

Federal Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger has declared there would be no revaluation before the election. This has been modified by his finance and economic ministers to no "unilateral" revaluation.

Hence the new French government will hold the key. Most experts here expect it will swallow de Gaulle's pride and devalue the franc.

Frenchmen May Choose Down-to-Earth 'Unknown'

By DON COOK, from Paris

President Charles de Gaulle's interim successor until a new French president is elected will be a 60-year-old lawyer-economist who could scarcely provide a greater contrast between Gaullist grandeur and down-to-earth reassuring French simplicity.

His name is Alain Poher and he will assume the interim presidency by virtue of his office as president of the French senate — a succession which de Gaulle sought to abolish in the Sunday constitutional referendum. Poher campaigned vigorously against the referendum, with particular effect because he made it clear that he was against the constitutional changes and not against General de Gaulle.

"Nothing obliges the chief of state to renounce his mandate," he told the French people in an election broadcast last week. "He was elected for seven years, until the end of 1972, and if the people reject this referendum there is nothing in the constitution which requires him to go. His constitutional responsibility is not called into question. That is why I regret his determination and I hope he will reconsider his decision."

"For my part, I have absolutely no wish for these functions, but if I assume them I will carry them out with all the firmness necessary because that is my duty as a republican and a democrat."

Poher became president of the senate last October, after a parliamentary election which gave the Gaullists effective control of the upper chamber for the first time since de Gaulle came to power. He succeeded Gaston Monnerville, whom de Gaulle detested. Monnerville was one of the factors that drove de Gaulle to his determination to alter the constitution by referendum and make the prime minister rather than the senate president the successor.

Poher was a centrist supporter of de Gaulle — though his own political roots were in the now-defunct MRP (Popular Republican Movement) of the Catholic Left.

Moreover, he is one of the ardent French post-war Europeans — having served as cabinet chief to Robert Schuman when the latter was finance minister in 1946 and subsequently holding administrative posts in the post-war Ruhr authority, the European Coal and Steel Community, and the European Common Market.

Poher was born in the Paris region, the son of an engineer, and he holds degrees in law, political economy and mining engineering. During the Second World War he won the croix de guerre and a resistance medal.

He is typical of a whole echelon of Frenchmen who work with intelligence, competence and effectiveness in the second or third layer of power, and but for de Gaulle's referendum his name would scarcely be known outside a limited circle in his own country.

Nobody could possibly have pointed any finger of destiny at the man, but as soon as de Gaulle announced his referendum, Poher began his campaign from the podium of the French senate, and kept it up around the country and on television. His straightforward simplicity had great appeal to voters who were looking for clarity in the complications of the referendum issues.

One Frenchman remarked after a Poher speech: "He is absolutely right — why does de Gaulle think he has to do away with the senate? France needs a second chamber to act as a check on the assembly, and tell the assembly to go back and think again if it tries to do something stupid or wrong. We will need it even more when de Gaulle goes."

By presenting himself as a man without ambition campaigning on a matter of principle, neither a party leader nor a candidate for any office, Poher in fact has already come close to turning himself into a potential left-centre compromise candidate for a full seven-year term.

New Look at Canada Depends on New Man

By CY FOX
From Paris

The degree of possible change in French policy towards Canada likely will depend on who succeeds Charles de Gaulle as regular president of France.

And so would the speed with which any such policy alterations were launched.

But the French today are too preoccupied with the immediate domestic consequences of de Gaulle's resignation to give much time to detailed thoughts on such matters as Franco-Canadian relations.

These relations came in for much argument here in the period immediately after the general made his famous "Vive le Quebec libre" declaration in Montreal in July, 1967.

But exciting far more comment since then have been such Gaullist policies as those affecting the Middle East and NATO.

If George Pompidou is elected next chief of state, these aspects of foreign policy might be given priority over the Canadian question.

In any case, Pompidou would have to take his time in backtracking from the Canadian or any other stands taken by his famous predecessor.

The hope in some quarters here is that constructive ties forged by de Gaulle with French-speaking Canada will remain strong, but without what some critics of the general might regard as the role he envisaged for France in the political destiny of Canada, including Quebec.

Victory for a leftist or other anti-Gaullist presidential candidate might bring faster switches in French policies towards Canada than would a Pompidou triumph.

De Gaulle was the first French leader in centuries to take on active interest in French-speaking Canada.

For decades, there was basic estrangement between what traditionally was a deeply church-oriented Quebec and the pre-Gaullist republics, which were often fiercely anticlerical in outlook.

Non-Gaullist politicians here tend to perpetuate old republican orientations.

De Gaulle drew on a deep sense of world-spanning French nationality as well as on foreign policy concepts like development of counter-balances to the big powers, in formulating his Canadian policies.

These views seem little shared by Alain Poher and presidential hopefuls further to the left. But solution of the French domestic tangle must come before the outlook for Franco-Canadian relations is clarified.

The Things de Gaulle Said

Like Winston Churchill and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Charles de Gaulle used his language as a weapon of war and peace. The following are some of the notable things he said:

"I am France."

"At this moment (1940), the worst in her history, it was for me to assume the burden of France."

"Men cannot manage without being ordered any more than they can do without eating, drinking or sleeping. Being political animals, they need organization, they need orders and leaders . . ."

"France cannot be France without greatness."

"Looking up at the stars, I steep myself in the insignificance of earthly things."

(From a poem written at age 14) "Oh, it was a terrible, horrible, ugly, great, gigantic, furious, frightful combat."

"They (military arms) have summoned the spirit of sacrifice from the most mediocre of men, given honor to rogues and dignity to slaves. There would have been no Hellenic civilization, Roman order, Christianity, rights of man, or modern civilization without the bloody deed of war."

"To dominate events, to stamp his mark on them, to take the consequences, that indeed is what is expected of a leader."

"Old age is a shipwreck."

(To a friend) "Ah, if I were president of the United States!"

Near Laotian Border

GIs Repulse Reds In Fierce Battle

SAIGON (AP) — Advancing behind a curtain of shellfire, about 150 North Vietnamese attacked a United States armored column in South Vietnam near the Laotian border Monday, but were stopped by artillery, tank-gun and machine-gun fire.

Some North Vietnamese got inside the column's defense perimeter and attacked the armor with flame throwers and dynamite bombs. But a withering barrage from the American tanks and armored cars backed up by artillery killed at least 34 of the attackers in the 4½-hour battle.

Five Americans were killed and 34 wounded in the fight which occurred five miles from the Laotian border in the north-west corner of South Vietnam.

Monday's attack, on a night bivouac of elements of the U.S. 1st Brigade, 5th Mechanized Infantry Division, was the second in four days against the division.

The 5th Division's troops have been operating near the Laotian border area the last few days to try to choke off North Vietnamese supply and infiltration routes from Laos.

KILLED 16 VIET CONG

In other action Monday, elements of the 23rd Infantry Americal Division clashed with Viet Cong guerrillas about 15 miles south of Da Nang, killing 16 Viet Cong. No U.S. casualties were reported.

The U.S. command said two

U.S. Army light observation helicopters were shot down Sunday and their four crew members killed on reconnaissance missions near the Cambodian border northwest of Saigon. This raised to 2,569 the number of U.S. helicopters lost in the Vietnam war. Eighteen of the helicopters have been lost in the last six days.

30,000 HOMELESS

U.S. military spokesmen said two persons were killed, 66 wounded and 20,000 left temporarily homeless in the wake of the 14-hour fire and series of explosions caused by burning rubbish Sunday at a U.S. marine ammunition dump at Da Nang.

Riots Rock Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Thousands of students, throwing rocks and flaming sticks, turned Tokyo's Ginza area into a tear-gas-choked battleground Monday night, climaxing a day of anti-American demonstrations.

Tokyo police, whose tight barricades kept the students away from the United States Embassy and main Japanese government offices, reported 94 officers were injured and 937 students arrested. The fire department, which handles Tokyo's ambulance service, estimated about 200 persons were injured.

Leftists had designated Monday "Okinawa Day," 17th anniversary of the Second World War peace treaty which placed Okinawa under U.S. control.

TALKS GOING

The Japanese want the territory back and government talks are under way in Washington.

Monday's demonstrators also shouted for abolition of the U.S.-Japan security treaty.

Converging on Tokyo's central railway station, about 3,000 radical students marched down the tracks to nearby Shibashi Station.

Soviets Silent on Atomics

HONG KONG (Reuters) — The Soviet Union Monday accused the ninth Chinese Communist party congress of attempting to split the international Communist movement and said it led to an "anti-people party" headed by Mao Tse-tung.

But the attack, made in a Chinese-language broadcast monitored here, contained no reference to a report to the congress by Vice-Chairman Lin Biao which was released by Peking Sunday.

ATOMIC WAR

In the 24,000-word report against "U.S. and Soviet revisionism," which the New China news agency said was given and passed unanimously April 1, Lin called on the Chinese to be prepared for an atomic war with both the U.S. and Russia.

He listed the U.S. as No. 1 enemy of China and Russia No. 2, and declared: "We must make adequate preparations, we must be prepared for full-scale war with them, for an all out war effort, for a long-term war with them, and also be prepared for a nuclear war with them."

MAO VIEWPOINT

The Russian broadcast said the congress showed Mao's anti-

Maoist-Leninist viewpoint, and said "Mao Tse-tung has completely betrayed the principles of Marxism-Leninism and internationalism."

In his report, Lin, officially named successor to Mao, told the congress which ended in Peking last week that China's foreign policy is consistent and not based on expediency.

The text of the report, issued by the New China news agency, quoted Lin as saying China wants to work for peaceful co-existence with countries of different social systems on the basis of five principles.

These were mutual respect for territorial integrity and sovereignty, mutual non-aggression, non-interference in internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit and peaceful co-existence, the agency said.

Flood Fighters Leave As Assiniboine Eases

By CP, UPI

WINNIPEG — More than 300 servicemen were pulled out of river fighting duties Monday along a stretch of the Assiniboine River 15 miles west of here.

Government spokesmen said 25 would remain to continue reinforcing dikes until the river drops appreciably, but the worst appeared over.

There was only minor topping of dikes, piled high with sandbags, when the river reached its crest on the weekend. The more than 350 servicemen in the area on duty managed to prevent any major breakthroughs.

However, flood control officials say there is a waiting period of about 10 days before the high water pressure will be eased on the sodden dikes.

Surveillance is the key, they say, because the longer the pressure remains, the more vulnerable the dikes will become to being breached.

Servicemen were moved into the area last Wednesday to aid civilians working to save adjacent farmlands and communities when the waters rose sharply and existing dikes were at near capacity.

In the U.S. people who live along the Mississippi River in Illinois and Iowa breathed a sigh of relief when predicted heavy rains and high winds bypassed the area.

The light rain that dotted the flood-stricken communities produced little rise in the swollen Mississippi, but heavy downpours caused a sharp upward climb in the Missouri River.

speaking voters across Quebec, backed up by personal interviews with 52 more.

English fears of a trend toward a uniting Quebec were aroused recently by a decision of the school board in the Montreal suburb of St. Leonard to abolish English-language elementary schools, a decision which remains unchallenged by the Quebec government.

These fears have been heightened by the persistent campaign of several nationalist groups in the province to eliminate the use of English as an official language in Quebec.

Supporters of Rene Levesque and his separatist Parti Quebecois are more inclined than those in other parties to favor a French only policy—even though Levesque himself opposes it.

Among his supporters, however, fewer than half—46 per cent—feel a bilingual Quebec would be desirable.

Among Union Nationale supporters, 29 per cent favor a bilingual Quebec and among Liberals only 24 per cent feel it would be desirable.

Those who are uncertain of how they would vote in a provincial election are least likely to favor a French only policy.

A 48-year-old construction engineer in the Montreal suburb of Duvernay was dead-set against bilingualism. "We'd be boycotted by everyone."

His neighbor, an assistant bank manager, said: "A thing like that doesn't help French."

Canadians. It would set us back another 25 years."

A mechanic in Hull pointed out: "Today, you need both French and English to get along. I like it when I go to Alberta—I did that last year—and I can make myself understood."

Even those who prefer a uniting French-Quebec recognize the difficulties involved. A Montreal stock-keeper put it this way: "I'd like to work in French. I've had a lot of trouble working for an English firm. French Canadians should be permitted to work in their own language. But we couldn't say only French—that is unless we weren't going to travel outside the province."

Only 20 per cent of those polled believed that a special relationship between France and Quebec was not desirable.

And while another 20 per cent thought such a relationship was very desirable, the larger group—56 per cent—considered such a relationship to be only moderately desirable.

The relationship is considered desirable for language and cultural reasons, but there is little desire to have political or economic relations with France.

A 34-year-old Sherbrook housewife explained: "I think it's desirable for cultural reasons. But on condition they don't mix into our politics."

A 56-year-old salesman in Granby: "We've got nothing to learn from France. If French Canadians manage to persist as a group it won't be because of France. They dropped us once already."

A 58-year-old Montreal businessman: "It's a question of education and language. But their politics are completely foreign to us. And we don't need French economic domination here any more than we need American."

Liberal party supporters are least likely to consider a special France-Quebec relationship as very desirable.

Only 14 per cent are in this category as opposed to 23 per cent of the Union Nationale and 30 per cent of the Parti Quebecois.

There is relatively little difference among supporters of the various provincial parties as to whether Quebec has a special responsibility to protect the culture of French Canadians living outside Quebec.

Even Parti Quebecois supporters generally share the majority view that Quebec has such a responsibility.

As a 43-year-old Quebec City clerk put it: "It's a question of protection. Each group tries to conserve its language and its customs."

Levesque Cites Backlash

Hellyer Resignation Blamed on Quebec

MONTREAL (CP)—Rene Levesque, leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois, says Quebecers were responsible for Paul Hellyer's resignation last week as federal transport minister.

Canada is in the process of becoming ungovernable, he said at a news conference Sunday, and "it is us, Quebecers, who have rendered the country ungovernable."

In resigning from the federal cabinet last Thursday, Mr. Hellyer said he had been unable to get approval for his housing policies but also noted differences between himself and the prime minister over the concept of federalism and the role of the central government.

Canadians were becoming impatient with the obstacles to centralization thrown up by Quebecers and were forming an English-speaking "Backlash," Mr. Levesque said.

It was not only a backlash against the policies of Prime Minister Trudeau, but also against anything which in one way or another was to the advantage of Quebec.

But you also have to live and let live."

A 28-year-old machinist in Montreal: "If Quebec doesn't do it, who will?"

Only die-hard separatists deny that Quebec has a role in protecting French culture in other provinces. A Montreal toolmaker was blunt: "Look, if they're living in the west, they're lost to us anyway. They're assimilated."

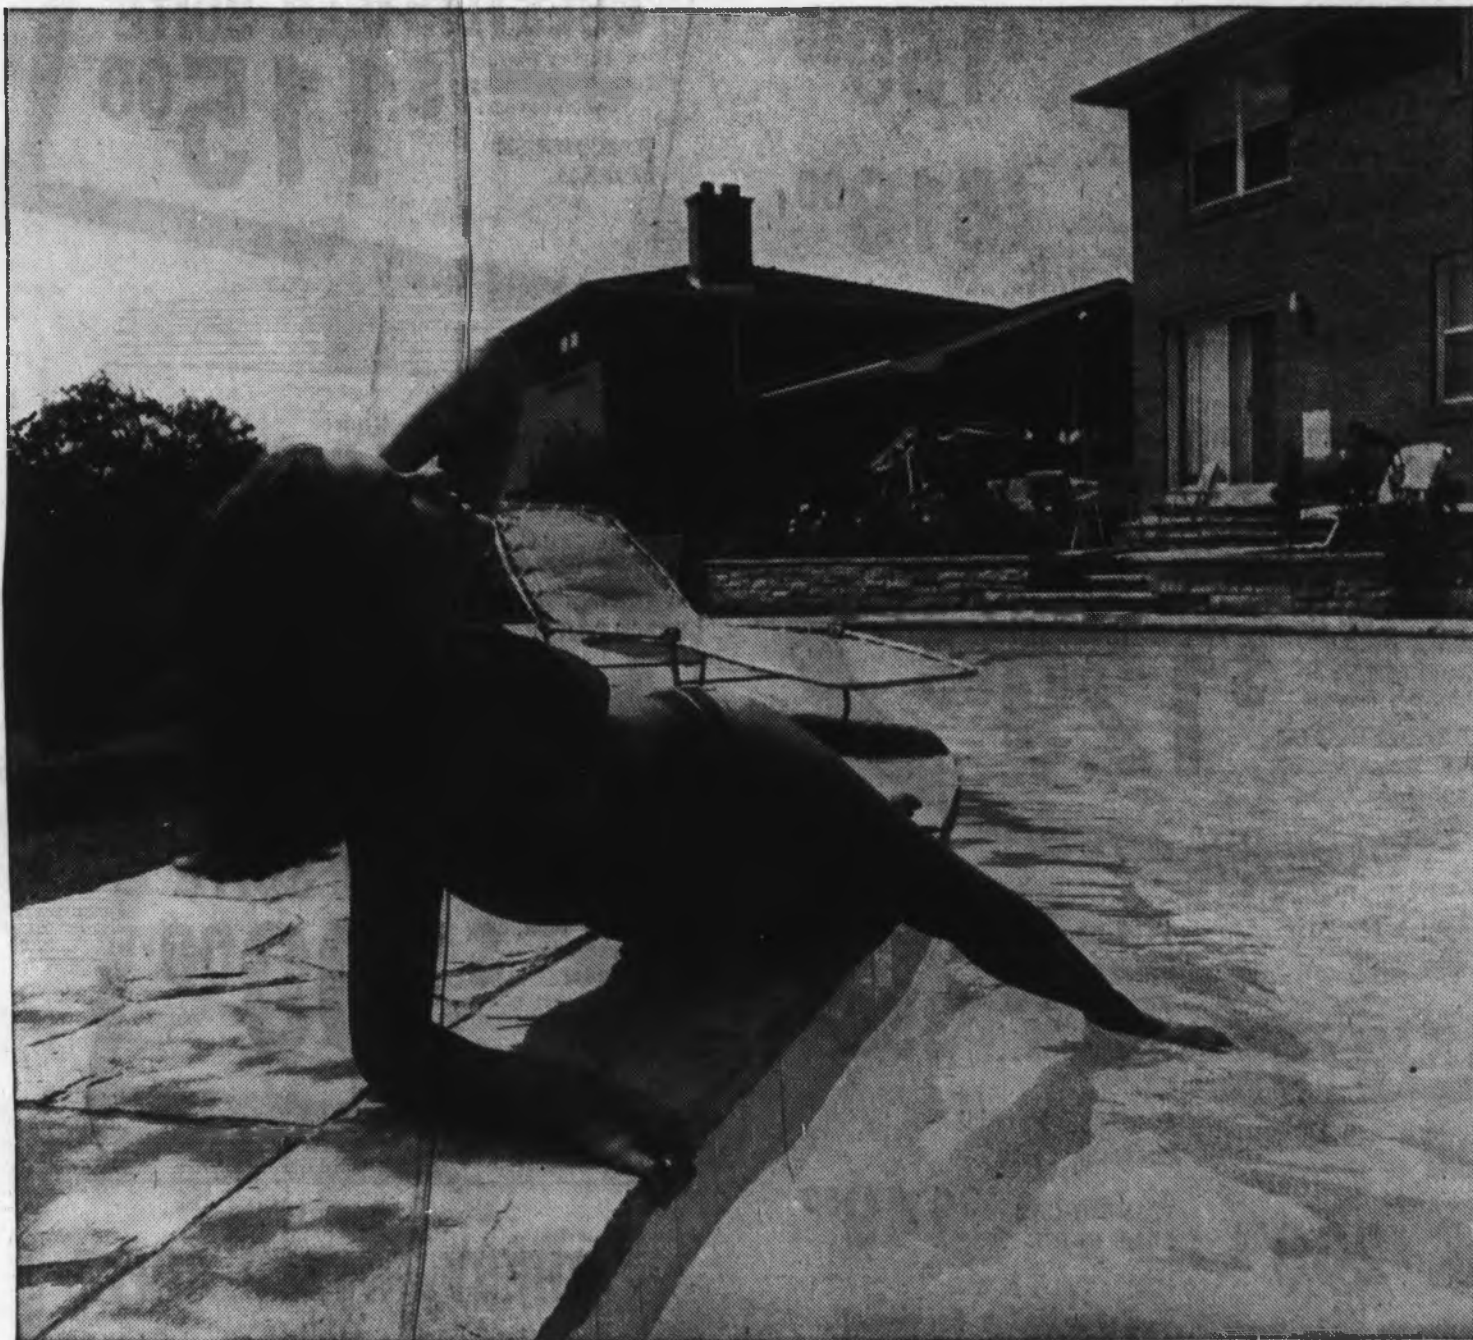

There is a growing awareness among French Canadians that language and culture are not merely abstract values, but are of practical benefit. To be able to speak French at work as well as at home represents not only a triumph of human values, but also a chance to be more effective on the job.

This view is reflected in the comment of a 23-year-old salesman working for an English Canadian firm in Montreal. "I'm bilingual," he said, "but you do better in your own language. I always feel I'm not really getting across when speaking English. We've got to change this or French Canadians will always be behind the English."

Ruling Party Loses Edge

CASTRIES, St. Lucia (Reuters)—St. Lucia's ruling United Workers party has been voted back into office but with a reduced majority.

The party, led by Premier John Clifton, won six of 10 seats, two fewer than it had held before the election.

Wage Issue Snag

Air Canada's On Its Own —Mackasey

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA (Special) — Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey appears to have backed off from Prime Minister Trudeau's firm position on the Air Canada strike that the unions wage demands were beyond the Crown corporation's ability to pay.

He was reporting to the Commons on the Sunday night break-off by Air Canada and the International Association of Machinists of bargaining after a week of negotiations.

Every issue had been settled, he told the Commons, but that of wages.

When the corporation and the 6,300-member union began talking, Air Canada was offering 21 per cent over three years and the machinists were demanding 20 per cent over one year.

When they parted Sunday, the corporation was standing firm on its offer, with the union stepping down its demand to 24 per cent over two years with six per cent "step-ups" semi-annually.

DOESN'T APPLY

Prime Minister Trudeau last week stressed that the government was not applying to Air Canada the unofficial but generally observed wage "guidelines" governing wage increases for the federal civil service of between five and seven and one-half per cent.

Air Canada, emphasized the prime minister, was a Crown corporation and bargained "independently" of the government.

There were no government guidelines applicable in the strike, he went on, for if there had been, the offer would not have been so "very generous" as Air Canada's.

To pay the union price for labor peace, the prime minister had said in pursuing the hard line, was beyond Air Canada's financial capacity.

Yesterday, this was exactly what Mackasey avoided saying. In his bargaining book, Air Canada, while it might be a Crown corporation, could expect "no special preferential treatment."

It was strictly on its own," he ruled, just like, for example, "Ogilvie Flour Mills or any other company," and "completely free to negotiate wage rates as it sees fit and is capable to paying."

As to the economic reality of the union's rate demand which the prime minister so pointedly had questioned, Mackasey remained mum.

While the bargaining proceeded — if and when resumed — "disruptive and unpleasant" as the strike was, the labor minister said, the paying public would just "have to get used to it."

Meanwhile his department and Mackasey himself were ready to take a helping hand in the negotiations "if requested."

Until Air Canada's 108-plane fleet again was flying, he suggested, the public had "alternative methods of transportation."

"Who are you kidding?" shot back North Calgary Conservative MP Eldon Woolliams. West Edmonton Conservative M.P. Marcel Lambert asked anxiously of reported union threats that it might instruct its members in other airlines to "observe the machinists' picket lines" at Air Canada or even strike "in sympathy."

If such a threat had been made, the labor minister replied, the government hadn't been told about it.

Back came Woolliams to ask whether the government had thought about carrying out recommendations of the Woods Report on labor for the setting up of some sort of control or limitation, in the public interest, of strikes in "essential service" industries.

The Woods Report, countered Mackasey, had recommended "a minimum of government interference in labor relations."

Personally, snapped the labor minister, he wasn't ready to listen to any "reactionary solutions" to public service strikes.

Finally, Prince Edward-Hastings Conservative MP George Hees, a former Conservative transport minister, noting that Air Canada had been strike-grounded on several occasions before, asked if the government was thinking about expanding operating licences for Canadian Pacific and other airlines to "reduce Air Canada's monopoly," and give the public a better break.

Prime Minister Trudeau "took notice" of the question — meaning he will think it over and answer later, maybe.

CYC Lives On

New Role Seen by Pelletier

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has no intention of disbanding the Company of Young Canadians, State Secretary Gerard Pelletier assured the Commons Monday.

He was replying to Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary Centre), who asked whether the government is considering such a move in view of the "wide-spread disfavor" in which the group is held by many Canadians.

Pelletier, in London, Ont., at a "youth policy."

Teachers Take Defensive Measures

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Teachers' Federation is warning teachers across Canada against signing contracts to serve in national defence department schools overseas.

The teachers' federation said in a statement Monday that the action follows a formal announcement to the federation by Defence Minister Leo Cadieux that his department refuses to consult the teachers before making changes in teaching contracts.

Provincial teacher organizations, after expressing their alarm about the situation to the national federation, were advising their 180,000 members not to sign contracts with the defence department until further notice.

The CTF says the defence department changed its contract eight months ago without notifying the teachers.

The new contract contained clauses "worded in such a way that protection of the teacher's professional rights is left to the discretion of the minister."

Attempts by the CTF to see the minister and clarify the sit-

Doctors Can Refuse If Abortions Legal

OTTAWA (CP) — Doctors who refuse to perform certain operations because of conscience cannot be held criminally responsible for the consequences, Justice Minister John Turner told the Commons Monday.

Therapeutic abortions, which would become legal under Criminal Code amendments before Parliament, are only one of several types of operations which some doctors and hospitals feel conscience-bound to refuse, Turner said.

Many doctors believed they should not administer blood transfusions or perform organ transplants or hysterectomies.

LIFE OR HEALTH

Turner was replying to opposition questions on proposed changes in the law which would permit abortions where the life or health of a prospective mother is endangered.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) moved an amendment to the bill, which is at the report stage, making it clear that the law would not be "construed as obliging any hospital to establish a therapeutic abortion committee or any qualified medical practitioner to procure the miscarriage of a female person."

Gerald W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River) said the bill, which next goes to third and final reading, gives the impression there will be a statutory requirement to conduct abortions.

Turner said there is nothing in the bill that would impose criminal liability on a doctor who did not perform an abortion.

BISHOPS' VIEW

The only new liability that could be imposed by legalizing abortions, the minister suggested, is the liability on the hospital and the doctor to advise the patient of her rights to go to another hospital.

Gerard Laprise (Creditiste-Abitibi) said the Roman Catholic bishops of Canada, after an extensive study of abortion, had requested that the government respect the freedom of doctors, hospitals and hospital employees to follow the dictates of their conscience and refuse to perform or assist in abortions. That was all McCleave's amendment sought to do.

MEDICAL SIDE

Rene Matte (Creditiste-Champlain) said it is discouraging for MPs to realize that regardless of what is said in debates the decisions about how to vote will have already been made.

He warned that in supporting the government's proposals on abortion MPs will be flying in the face of the expressed views of the medical profession of Quebec.

Alcan Appointment

Business Topics

The appointment of Peter Morton as Western Sales Manager, Mill Products, Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. located in Vancouver, has been announced by R. W. F. Phillips, General Manager, Mill Products.

Born in Victoria, Mr. Morton received his elementary schooling at Port Alberni, B.C., before attending schools in England and Northern Ireland. He spent some years in both the metals and building product industries before joining Alcan in 1961 as a market specialist. He became Marketing Manager of the Sheet and Plate Division in 1967.

Forest Firm Flying After Wintry Slump

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

The greatest month on record was established in March by MacMillan Bloedel, as the giant forest industry firm pulled out all stops to make up for weather-ruined months of January and February.

Chairman J. V. Clynne, in the first-quarter report to shareholders, said that during January and February when B.C. experienced its worst weather in many decades, some phases of company's operations were affected.

The net profit for those two months was the lowest experienced since the merger with Powell River in late 1959.

When normal weather returned in March shipments of all major products, particularly newsprint, were accelerated to such an extent that total shipments for the March quarter exceeded those of the corresponding quarter of 1968. Net earnings for the period were $10,238,469 (49 cents a share) compared with $7,400,000 (35 cents) a year ago. Sales rose to $154,762,329 from $130,332,274.

HIGHER PRICES
Clynne said the effect of additional facilities provided by the company's expansion program, together with improved prices, resulted in March recording the highest single-month operating profit in the history of the company.

Prospects for the remainder of the year appeared encouraging, he said.

JOLLY FAMILY NOW

A new family of Jolly Jumper companies with worldwide patents, trademarks and distributing rights for the famous Vancouver-developed baby exerciser has been formed.

Jolly Jumper Products of America of Toronto has taken over four companies to bring this about. They are International Pediatric Products and Jolly Jumper Sales of British Columbia, and Jolly Jumper (Nassau) of the Bahamas and Bonnie Bouncer of Great Britain.

Patrick Ryan, president of the merged company, says Jolly Jumper's initial marketing program in the U.S. is meeting with "tremendous success" and is being extended. Plans are being prepared for two manufacturing plants in the U.S.

PLANT ON SCHEDULE

Peace River Mining and Smelting says its iron-powder plant at Amherstburg, Ont., is well on schedule and a startup is expected by Jan. 1, 1970.

Company personnel is being transferred to the site for pre-production training.

G. R. Heffernan, president, says that although the iron powder capacity scheduled to come into production in the next year may create an oversupply position in the early 1970s, Peace River expects its high-quality chemical produced powders will find a ready market.

Peace River's net profit for the six months ended Feb. 28 was $109,102, compared with $22,625 a year earlier. Income came from its Matthew Brady Holdings subsidiary.

CAN'T HAVE BOTH

Mining and other exploration companies needing new capital run into difficulties if their shares are listed on both the Toronto and Vancouver stock exchanges.

Because of conflicting rules and regulations, Silver Standard Mines has come to the conclusion there is at present no manner in which a company having such dual listings can obtain an underwriting of its treasury shares.

As Silver Standard is involved in a number of important mining projects in central B.C. for which it may require funds in the near future, its president R. W. Wilson has informed shareholders that a request for delisting from the Toronto Stock Exchange has been made.

WITH REGRET

Wilson says the decision to delist was voluntary and was taken with regret. The company says it has no quarrel with the TSE and hopes that at some future date, and under changing circumstances, it will be able to apply for relisting.

The listing with the Vancouver Stock Exchange will be maintained.

NEW FOREST ISSUE

A British Columbia Interior lumber company centred on Kamloops has turned public and is making an initial public offering of its common shares.

It is Balco Forest Products, which has about 8,000,000 board feet cutting rights a year and exports about 90 per cent of its products. A wood chip contract with Kamloops Pulp and Paper is also in existence.

The issue comprises 128,000 shares of which 60,000 are out of the treasury. The remaining 68,000 shares are being offered by the principal shareholders. The shares are being priced for distribution at $11.

In the quarter ended March 31, Balco reports its net profit at $251,000 (53 cents a share).

S-S KAMLOOPS-BOUND

Canadian Pacific Railway through its Marathon Realty Co. subsidiary is developing a 38-acre enclosed-mail shopping centre on its former freight yards in downtown Kamloops.

Major tenant of the project is Simpsons-Sears which is to build a 90,000-square-foot department centre. Construction will start immediately and the store will be ready by early 1970.

Chemical Tests Renewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The defence department confirmed Saturday that it is again testing chemical agents at the United States Army's Dugway Proving Ground in Utah, but under new precautions.

There was a public uproar after more than 6,000 sheep on ranges near the Dugway testing area died mysteriously in March, 1968.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars in claims filed by owners of the stricken animals have been approved.

Seaway Money Woes Still Same Old Story

OTTAWA (CP) — Official Ottawa didn't bat an eyelash when U.S. Congressman Roman C. Pucinski said last week the St. Lawrence seaway is "dangerously close" to bankruptcy.

Canadian authorities don't need to be told the seaway is having money troubles. Its financial plight has been an issue for several years.

Pierre Camu, president of Canada's St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, said in an interview Monday his annual report to Parliament is due in about two weeks and "it will tell the same old story."

The seaway is making an operating profit, he said, but cannot even make a beginning on the retirement of its debt.

Since the seaway is international, its tolls can be changed only by agreement between Canada and the United States. The last time the tolls were reviewed, in 1966, it was Washington, yielding to the heavy pressure of the Great Lakes states, that blocked an increase.

The question comes up again next year and Camu said it looks as though Canada again will favor a toll increase.

Pucinski, an Illinois Democrat, has introduced a private bill in the U.S. House of Representatives that he says would convert the debt of the U.S. St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corp. into a government investment.

Diner's Club Arrives

Kremlin on the Cuff

LONDON (AP) — Communism was supposed to lead to the cashless society, but credit cards have gotten there first. Diners' Club International announced Monday that its cards will be honored in Moscow after June 1.

The club said its members will be able to use their cards at Moscow's Metropole and National hotels. Both are run by Intourist, the Soviet state travel organization, and the card carriers will be able to pay their bills at home in their own currency.

Jonathan Boreham, president of the British branch of the Diners' Club, said the agreement with the Soviet Union took two years of negotiations to work out.

Duncan Selected B.C. Soccer Boy

BURNABY — Victoria can claim the provincial juvenile soccer boy for the second straight year following Sunday's selection of Bob Duncan of Boys Club, this year's Division II champion.

Duncan, 15, scored two goals in his club's victory Saturday and was named to the all-star team at his left-wing position before being named successor to Bruce Twanley, who won the trophy when the tournament was staged in Victoria last year.

Only other Victoria winner was Robin Jeffrey in 1967.

OTHER AWARDS

A Grade 9 student at Central Junior High School, Duncan has had an outstanding career in sports, winning awards at school as an all-round athlete.

He was awarded the sportsmanship trophy by the Victoria Babe Ruth Baseball League in 1967 and last year was the junior sprint champion in the school meet.

Joining Duncan on the all-star team was his teammate Wayne O'Malley, who took the goalkeeping berth with a standout display for his shut-out, earned with a fine save on a penalty shot.

Lorne Macleod was runner-up to Duncan and his Richmond NorWest Decors team, the Division VI champion, was named the top club.

Results:

Division I — Vancouver Grandview Legion, Westminister, Bel-Air, Salvo 2.

Division II — Victoria Boys Club 8, Burnaby City United 0.

Division III — Richmond Puritan Wanderers 1, Cliff Avenue 0.

Division IV — North Shore Legion 5, Abbotsford Legion 0.

Division V — Westminister Blue Mountians 2, North Shore Macdonald Highlanders 2.

Division VI — Richmond NorWest Decors 4, Westminister Wanderers 1.

Division VII — North Shore Burnaby Beavers 3, Burnaby Jubilee Rangers 2 in overtime. (Share trophy)

Baseball's Latest Expansion May Prove Boon to Giants

Major league baseball's second expansion may be just what San Francisco Giants needed.

Addition of two new clubs meant splitting into two divisions, and that could mean that if the Giants finish with the second-best National League record for a fifth consecutive year they would get a playoff chance at the league title.

At the moment, the Giants are looking as if they might wind up with the best record in their league.

SEVENTH STRAIGHT WIN

They're still second best, but they ran their winning streak to seven straight games Monday by defeating Cincinnati Reds, 4-3, with Bobby Bonds taking over from Willie McCovey as the San Francisco executioner.

Bonds whacked a 400-foot home run in his first time at bat and later scored two more runs.

On Sunday, McCovey hit three-run homers to provide the difference in each game as the Giants swept a doubleheader from Houston Astros, 8-5 and 4-3.

SHARE LEAD

All this has left the Giants sharing the Western Division lead with the surprising Los Angeles Dodgers.

Out of a Job

Dismissal as coach of Canada's Eastern national hockey team became official Monday for veteran-defenceman Jack Bowmans. Announcement was made in Niagara Falls by Hap Emma, general manager for Hockey Canada, the new corporation handling the Canadian national team.

Grant Captures NHL Rookie Honors Esposito, Orr, Delvecchio Selected

MONTREAL (CP) — Danny Grant, 23-year-old leftwinger obtained from Montreal Canadiens prior to the start of the season, has given the Western Division its second National Hockey League individual award.

Grant, who barely qualified, was named winner of the Calder Trophy as the outstanding rookie of the season at the annual awards luncheon Monday.

He received 119 out of a possible 180 points to nose out Norm Ferguson, the Oakland winger, who shares the record of 34 goals for a first-year player with Grant and is also a former Montreal-owned player, received 112 points.

With goalkeeper Gerry Desjardins of Los Angeles and forward Andre Lacroix of Philadelphia Flyers, two other players once owned by Canadiens, finishing fourth and fifth, respectively, the expansion division came off with a good showing.

Veterane Glenn Hall and Jacques Plante, St. Louis Blues' goaltending combination, had previously combined to win the Vezina Trophy.

Big winner was Phil Esposito. The Boston centre, who had previously received $1,750 for winning the Rose Trophy as scoring champion, was named the winner of the Hart Trophy as the most valuable player.

That brought Esposito an additional $1,500. Combined with the $1,251 he received when the Bruins finished second in the East Division, the $2,250 he received when his club reached the Stanley Cup semifinals and $1,500 from the series against Montreal, it brought his extra earnings to $3,250.

That total will almost certainly be increased when all-star selections are announced. Esposito is considered a shoo-in as the centre choice.

Esposito received 133 points, finishing far ahead of runner-up Jean Beliveau. The Montreal captain had 47 points to rate just ahead of Bobby Orr.

RUNAWAY WINNER

Orr, however, was a runaway winner in voting for the Norris Trophy. The 21-year-old Boston leader missed unanimous selection as the outstanding defenceman by four points as he won the trophy for the second straight time in his three-season career.

Toronto-veteran Tim Horton was second with 48 points.

Alex Delvecchio, who has played 18 seasons for Detroit Red Wings, was an easy winner in the voting for the Lady Byng Trophy, which goes each year to the player best combining ability and clean play.

Former-teammate Ted Hampson of Oakland was runnerup.

Winners of all trophies except the Vezina are further rewarded with $1,500 in cash, runnersup receiving $750. Hall and Plante shared $3,000 as being the least-scored-on goaltending combination.

CALDER TROPHY — Danny Grant, Minnesota, 119; Norm Ferguson, Oakland, 112; Brad Park, New York, 80; Gerry Desjardins, Los Angeles, 20; Andre Lacroix, Philadelphia, 8; Jean Pronovost, Pittsburgh, 3; Ricky Ley, Toronto, 3; Danny Gries, Minnesota, 1.

HART TROPHY — Phil Esposito, Boston, 133; Jean Beliveau, Montreal, 47; Bobby Orr, Montreal, 44; Ted Green, Boston, 37; Fred Howe, Detroit, 35; Al Arbour, New York, 31; Jacques Laperriere, Montreal, 27; Jim Harrison, New York, 25; Claude Tremblay, Montreal, 21; Bill White, Los Angeles, 4; Ted Horton, Toronto, 3; Jacques Plante, St. Louis, 3; John Ferguson, Montreal, 1; Bernie Parent, Philadelphia, 1.

JAMES NORRIS TROPHY — Bobby Orr, Boston, 138; Tim Horton, Toronto, 48; Ted Green, Boston, 37; Fred Howe, Detroit, 35; Al Arbour, New York, 31; Jacques Laperriere, Montreal, 27; Jim Harrison, New York, 25; Claude Tremblay, Montreal, 21; Bill White, Los Angeles, 4; Ted Horton, Toronto, 3; Jacques Plante, St. Louis, 3; John Ferguson, Montreal, 1; Bernie Parent, Philadelphia, 1.

LADY BYNG TROPHY — Alex Delvecchio, Detroit, 117; Ted Hampson, Oakland, 78; Bobby Hull, Chicago, 55; Dave Keen, Montreal, 3; Rod Gilbert, New York, 2; Stan Mikita, Chicago, 2; Ken Warran, Chicago, 4; Norm Ullman, Toronto, 6; Jean Beliveau, Montreal, 8; Jacques Laperriere, Montreal, 1.

His Record Still Stands

EAST HOATHLY, England (AP) — Sir Arthur Sims, 91, who held a world record in cricket, has died at his home here.

In 1914, he was a partner with Victor Trumper, the Australian star, in an eighth wicket stand of 433 for an Australian eleven against Canterbury at Christchurch, New Zealand. It still is the biggest eighth wicket partnership in the history of cricket.

Cowichan Pair Romps To First-Round Win

Medalists Lee Buden and Olive Holman of the Cowichan Golf Club were among Monday's winners in the first round of match play in the Victoria and District women's two-ball tournament.

The Cowichan partnership defeated Mickey Westcott and Mary Thorburn of Royal Colwood, 5 and 3, in play at Gorge Vale.

Second round is scheduled today at the Victoria Golf Club. Other results in the championship round and today's draw:

Lorna Rooper and Phyllis Coworth (U) defeated Joan Lawson and Dorothy Potts (U), 4 and 1.

Kay Tribe and June Lovitt (U) defeated Ida Wickham and Anne Jones (Mt. B.), 3 and 2.

Edna Hay and Daphne Dagg (GM) defeated Mary Rumber and Jean Christie (U), 3 and 2.

Betty Moore and Margaret Graham (V) defeated Gert Pumphrey and Nora O'Connell (GV), on the 18th.

B.C. Disaster Fund

Guidelines Must Be Established—Williston

B.C. will need to establish guidelines for aid supplied to communities under the province's $25,000,000 major disaster fund, Resources Minister Ray Williston said Monday.

The minister, who heads the provincial disaster committee appointed last week in the wake of a flood which ravaged downtown Trail, said he felt "some parameters must be placed around the act" to prevent applications for compensation "whenever a drop of water runs wild."

Within the past few days, Mr. Williston added, applications for flood relief had been received from communities like Castlegar and Thrums, located 15 and 20 miles from Trail. He said provincial officials had been sent there to determine whether provincial relief was merited.

The minister said he had received no confirmation from the professional damage assessment team now at work in Trail, either to confirm or disprove unofficial estimates that flood damage in that community exceeded $2,000,000.

Premier Bennett also said Monday he had received no word from Ottawa on the findings of a federal investigator who was to recommend to Prime Minister Trudeau what federal flood relief should be granted to Trail.

Flood Relief Fund "sets a fine precedent" for other groups and individuals in the Province. Contributions should be addressed to the fund, care of Trail City Hall.

Ottawa Awaiting Trail Report

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday the federal government is prepared to discuss possible relief aid for Trail, B.C., after it has received damage reports on flooding there.

Works minister Arthur Laing added in the Commons that an official of his department has visited the flood scene and is preparing a report.

Adjuster Team On Way

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ernest Earle, head of a city insurance adjustment firm named to assess flood damage at Trail, said Monday the job will be completed quickly.

He said a group of about 20 independent adjusters will arrive in Trail Wednesday. He estimated the job should be completed in about 10 days.

Earle said few of the property owners hit by last Wednesday's flood carried insurance covering flood damage.

"Our job is to assess the loss each person has suffered as a result of the flood and pass the figures to the provincial government," he said.

"Payments from the disaster fund will be based on our figures," said Earle.

He did not know the extent of the damage or how much the flood victims will receive from the Trail disaster fund.

But he said in the 1964 Port Alberni there was a 100 per cent payout on assessed damage. Earle headed the team assessing the Port Alberni Damage.

Who doesn't know you can buy the Ronson Varaflame Comet SL lighter at $7.95

Is it a Ronson Butane or isn't it? Sure it is. But, we don't blame anyone for taking a closer look at the new Ronson Varaflame Comet SL lighter. After all, everybody knows you just don't buy a Butane lighter for $7.95; that's lightweight, has an automatic trigger action, adjustable flame and is unique in design with a swivel top for flint storage. Especially a Ronson lighter.

But it's all true. The Ronson Varaflame Comet SL lighter is here. Perfect for ladies too. In red, black and white. And the Ronson Comet. Wind-proof. Perfect for pipes. In grey, black and white. So don't let the low price fool you. Even at $7.95 the Ronson Varaflame Comet is still a Ronson.

Fills in seconds, lights for months.

The people of British Columbia are invited to participate in

The British Columbia Festival of Sports

May 18-30, 1970

The feats of Nancy Greene, Elaine Tanner, Harry Jerome, Ralph Hutton, Debbie Brill, Karen Magnussen, and many others in the field of individual athletics in recent years have thrilled every British Columbian. Nineteen Canadian Champions and three World Record holders come from our Province. Our rowers and other teams of young people on playing fields and courts far from home have been an inspiration to us all.

This year, your government has announced a broad program to encourage British Columbians in all forms of sport activity. As part of this program the Department of Travel Industry has been charged with helping to organize and promote "The British Columbia Festival of Sports", an annual event which I hope will gain participation in every community of the province and become a great source of encouragement to the youth of British Columbia.

The time period chosen for the Festival, ranging between our "Victoria Day" weekend and the U.S. "Memorial Day", was selected initially because it included or was adjacent to the broadest spectrum of athletic activity.

The importance of this event to the visitor industry in every region of the province is vital as well. I hope that fans and families of athletes will take the opportunity to visit communities throughout the province, make new friends, enjoy the fine recreational facilities and see first hand the great developments in the province. I hope, too, that these communities will help give the Festival international stature. These Festival events, falling in advance of the peak of our visitor season, will receive major promotion by the Department of Travel Industry in nearby states and provinces.

You are invited, through your constituted municipal and regional organizations and through the British Columbia Sports Federation and the British Columbia Recreation Association, to plan and participate in this great province-wide event.

Alex Kiernan
Honorary President,
The British Columbia Festival of Sports

The British Columbia Festival of Sports is to be organized at the community level. It is estimated that there are more than seventy communities in the province, in the eight tourist regions, which are capable of staging one or more sports tournaments and related events.

A Directorate and Selection Committee will be made up of representatives of the British Columbia Sports Federation, the Provincial Government, the Provincial Tourist Advisory Council and other segments of our population. This committee will arrange with interested communities and the province-wide amateur Sports Associations to allocate events equitably throughout the province.

The Festival is primarily interested in promoting amateur athletics, but professional and semi-professional organizations will be encouraged to stage events at the same time and thus benefit from the British Columbia Government promotion.

Cities that already have historic pageants, carnivals, parades and similar events during the summer months will be encouraged to stage some parts of their program at this earlier time in order to gain additional benefits from the "off-season" promotion.

Athletics in British Columbia

The following sports are organized into the British Columbia Sports Federation. Federation members have been asked to submit proposals for their sports on a provincial basis.

Archery • Badminton • Baseball • Basketball • Bowling, 5 & 10 pin • Boxing • Camping • Canoeing • Cricket • Curling • Cycling • Fencing • Field Hockey • Figure Skating • Football • Golf • Gymnastics • Gymnastics • Handball • Hard Court Tennis • Ice Hockey • Judo • Lacrosse • Lawn Bowling • Lawn Tennis • Life Saving • Marksmanship • Paraplegic Sports • Rowing • Rugby • Skiing • Soccer • Softball • Speed Skating • Swimming and Diving • Synchronized Swimming • Table Tennis • Track & Field, Indoor • Track & Field, Outdoor • Volleyball • Water Polo • Water Skiing • Weightlifting • Wrestling • Yachting.

Other sports which should be considered although not presently members of the Federation are: Auto Races • Bird Watching • Dune buggies • Falconry • Fishing Derbies •

Frost Bite Races • Logger Sports • Marathon Swimming • Mountaineering • Predicted Log Powerboat Races • Rodeos & Stampedes • SCUBA & Skin Diving • Skeet Shooting • Sky Diving • Soaring • Speedboat Races • Sports Car Races • Squash • Surfing • Trail Riding.

How your community can participate in the British Columbia Festival of Sports

Written submissions are being requested from municipal councils and/or whatever group (Chamber of Commerce, School Board, Fair or Rodeo Committee, Athletic Association, etc.) is designated to be the constituted body representing the community. These submissions are requested on or before Monday, June 23, 1969, and should be addressed to:

Dr. Robert Hindmarch,
President,
British Columbia Sports Federation,
1336 West Broadway,
Vancouver, British Columbia.

During the summer and early fall, field representatives of the Selection Committee will then visit your community for further discussion. Announcement of Festival locations will be made soon afterward.

The written submissions will form a catalogue of community interests and facilities with the idea that it will be upgraded in years to come.

These submissions should include:

1. The make-up of your Festival Committee (names, addresses, positions or particular sports interests).
2. A list of sports facilities that would be available during the Festival period... stadia, arenas, playing fields, swimming pools, etc. (giving dimensions, seating capacity and other pertinent features).
3. A brief statement outlining what sports events your community has staged in the past and how you might be prepared to stage an event in conjunction with members of the British Columbia Sports Federation. Each event should be designed to be self-sustaining.
4. An indication of how many extra visitors could be handled in your community and environs during this period.

5. A list of ancillary events that might be organized in your community during the Festival:

- a. Novelty events
- b. Parades, pageants and extravaganzas
- c. Cultural displays, festivals
- d. Historical and commemorative events

6. An indication of the earliest convenient dates your committee could meet in your community with our field representative.

In order to give regional balance to the assignment of events, the Directorate of the British Columbia Festival of Sports will be made up in part by one representative from each of the eight constituted provincial tourist regions. This director should be selected by the interested communities in conjunction with their respective tourist promotional body:

- "A" Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands
- "B" Greater Vancouver, Fraser Valley, Sunshine Coast
- "C" Okanagan and Similkameen Valleys
- "D" East and West Kootenays
- "E" Trans-Canada, Yellowhead and Nicola Highways
- "F" Cariboo-Chilcotin Country
- "G" Highway 16 (Prince Rupert to Alberta)
- "H" Peace River and Northern Districts

Names of these Regional Directors should be submitted to the Deputy Minister of Travel Industry, Mr. R. B. Worley, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, by May 30, 1969, by the President of the Regional Travel organization. Approximately four directors' meetings will be held during the year and these directors will receive travel allowance.

Like our highly successful centennial, this is a great challenge to British Columbians everywhere. From the interest, the healthy environment and the sports facilities developed locally will come the athletic champions of the world. This annual event could become British Columbia's foremost single visitor attraction.

The British Columbia Festival of Sports is sponsored by the

DEPARTMENT OF TRAVEL INDUSTRY.

Musical Bonus Provided

By BERT BINNY

It was musical bonus day Sunday in and around the McPherson Playhouse.

The scheduled attraction was a concert by the Lansdowne junior high school band. But this program actually included two bands.

Curtain time was 2:30 p.m., and it came as a surprise, even if a pleasant one, to hear the strains of Galt's Parlor music proceeding from Centennial Square at 1:45.

The authors of this particular melody were the Victoria City Police Youth Band, giving a bright one-hour concert right in the square.

It was a warmup session in preparation for the Victoria Day parade and a visit to Portland on May 24 and 25.

The curtain in the Playhouse went up promptly at 2:30 on Lansdowne's "blue" or junior band. This was the public debut of this group which numbers about 30. It was organized in January with some members who had only started their instrumental training in September.

PROGRESSING
However, under director Brian Longworth, a graduate of the McGill University School of Music, it has made notable progress.

The program travelled a musical path that led from a Claque by Handel to Yesterday and Michelle, two items from the Beatles. There was a Little Baroque Suite, and Mendelssohn was right in there with Midsummer Night's Dream.

A hand concert would be incomplete without a march, and the blue band provided G. E. Holmes' Festival March and rounded out its program with the familiar Born Free.

The "gold" or senior band took over the second half of the program, with its more numerous and more experienced members.

FOLK SONGS
Its program, too, displayed variety. A suite of four American folk songs was followed by Appassionata for Symphonica called Calypso Joint.

There was also a Vincent Youmans Fantasy and, for contrast two 17th-century Italian songs, Colossus and Curtain at 8 completed the program.

The month of May sees two more Sunday afternoon school band concerts at the McPherson: Belmont on the 11th and Victoria High on the 18th.

Facelift New Life For Tug

More than a half century of hard work towing log booms and barges will end next week for the 58-year-old tug, Sea King I.

The vessel has been sold to a Boeing Company employee who plans to convert it to a yacht and live on it after he retires.

NEW FAD
"There's quite a fad going now for converting old tugs into yachts," said a spokesman for Island Tug and Barge Ltd., which sold the ship after operating it since 1952.

Built in Victoria in 1911, the tug was first operated by Vancouver Island Towing.

In 1913, Ellice Cavin took command and captained the tug until the early years of the depression when it was sold to Dolmage Towing of Vancouver. Captain Cavin, who retired in 1958 after 53 years at sea, was captain of the Island Champion which set the course for Marilyn Bell when she became the first swimmer to swim the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Buy a Volvo, keep it a long time, and get out from under car payments for a change.

Of course, if you had bought a Volvo two or three years ago, you'd have something today.

You'd have a two or three-year-old Volvo.

Which isn't bad to have. Because where three years is the beginning of the end for some cars, it's only the beginning for a Volvo.

Volvos aren't built to wear out on a three-year plan. They're built to last eleven years in Sweden where it's tough being a car.

Now you might say to yourself, "If I kept a car 11 years I'd get sick and tired of driving it." You won't.

Driving a Volvo is a pleasure. It handles more like a sports car than a roomy family sedan. And unlike a sports car, Volvo comes equipped with 7-way adjustable bucket seats, rear-window defroster, thermostatically controlled heating system and other such niceties.

Of course, if you keep your Volvo 11 years, what you might get sick and tired of is looking at it.

In that case, you can always afford to take a trip away from it. Using the money you've saved by not making car payments.

When you get back, it'll start looking good again.

Sick Leave for Teachers To Face Testing in Court

An Oak Bay teacher will soon take the Greater Victoria school board to court in a test case affecting all 20,000 B.C. teachers and their 85 school boards.

At issue is interpretation of a 1968 amendment to the Public Schools Act giving teachers increased sick leave.

The case of Mrs. Kathleen Boone of 1733 Monteith, a teacher at Oak Bay senior high school, is being sponsored by the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

RETROACTIVE CLAIM
The BCTF, through Mrs. Boone, claims the new schools legislation is retroactive for the full period of a teacher's service to a school board.

The Greater Victoria board, through Victoria lawyer John Wood, will argue that the increased sick leave provision took effect only one year ago, when the amendment was passed.

Previously the Public Schools Act allowed a teacher one day's sick leave for each month of a 10-month school year. Maximum accumulation was 60 days.

The 1968 session of the Legislature amended Section 132 of the act to say:

"... The board shall allow him full pay for the number of days of such absence that is equivalent to one and one-half times the number of months taught by him in the service of the board..."

Maximum accumulated sick leave was doubled to 120 days. If Mrs. Boone and the BCTF win the case, all B.C. teachers will have gained a 50-per-cent increase in their sick leave accumulated prior to April, 1968.

The B.C. School Trustees' Association reports the department of education interprets the increased sick leave provision as taking effect in April, 1968. No date has been set for a hearing of the case.

In other teacher-school board legal action, teachers' associations of Qualicum and Vancouver Island West are appealing against 1969 salary arbitration awards.

The teachers are seeking to have non-salary matters included in their contracts. A Supreme Court hearing has been set for May 6 in Vancouver.

Private Broadcasters Reel Under 'Burdens' by Ottawa

EDMONTON (CP) — The president of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters opened the organization's annual meeting Monday with a speech expressing the restiveness of the private broadcasting industry under the weight of government regulations.

J. R. Peters of Vancouver told about 500 delegates at the convention's opening session that there are so many federal regulations governing so many aspects of broadcasting that radio and television stations often have little chance to carry out their responsibilities effectively or efficiently.

DANGER CLEAR
Professor John Tebbel of the New York University journalism department took Peters' theme a step further in an address later in the day, saying eyes to these facts, Peters said, "we could find every broadcaster in the country breaking his neck to produce programming that strengthens the Canadian identity and fabric, while our listeners and viewers are tuned to broadcasting stations based in other countries of the world."

He said what freedom remains is being nibbled away continuously, and he called on broadcasters and journalists in all countries to join in the struggle against this erosion.

FEARS NEW BURDENS
Peters sounded a similar note: "It is obvious that the time has come for all private broadcasters to make it clear that if our authorities want the Canadian broadcasting industry to grapple successfully with its responsibilities, they cannot place any new and additional burdens upon us."

Peters said private broadcasters have tried to safeguard Canadian culture, but it is becoming increasingly unrealistic to expect broadcasters to maintain current levels of Canadian content in their programming.

U.S. PREFERRED
Canadians clearly prefer program material originating in the United States and, with development of cable television systems and communications satellites, they are acquiring better and better direct access to foreign programs.

Help Needy, Pope Pleads

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul greeted United Nations Secretary-General U Thant Monday and called on the world's more prosperous countries to help the needy.

"People are growing tired of words and more and more are looking for action," said the Roman Catholic pontiff at a reception for Thant and the heads of UN specialized agencies meeting in Rome.

Also with the group was the president of the World Bank, Robert McNamara, former United States defence secretary.

Older Skin Can Aid Grafting

Suitability of tissue or organs for transplant purposes is not always influenced by age of the donor, a local doctor said Sunday.

The skin of older persons may even be more suitable for skin grafts for burn cases than the skin of younger people, said Dr. Paul Gareau, a member of a three-man panel discussing human organ transplants before the Victoria Chapter of the Memorial Society of B.C.

CORNEAS ALSO
He said elderly donors might also be suitable for cornea and other organ transplants.

A second panelist, Vancouver lawyer Anthony Gargrave, explained the 1968 Human Tissue Act to the 150 attending the meeting at the provincial museum.

He said it was simple now for a person wishing to donate some part of his body to make his wishes known, either in writing or orally before witnesses.

NEXT-OF-KIN
At death, the next-of-kin is also empowered to authorize use of the body for therapeutic or research purposes.

The third panelist, Rev. Hartwell Ilsey of United Church in Esquimalt, raised the question of moral and ethical considerations arising from recent medical developments.

It was the first public meeting of the society's Victoria chapter.

Knudson-designed aluminum shaft clubs.

Now at your local sports dealers.

Spalding's new George Knudson Alumi-powered clubs are made with special aluminum shafts. They feel like steel, but they're lighter. So they give you more speed with the same swing power.

And their tightness allowed us to do a radical thing. We took some of the weight we saved on the shaft and put it in the club head. That extra club head weight guarantees you more power on impact.

Which boils down to one thing. You'll hit the ball farther. Ask George.

Library Grants Change Proposed

The Greater Victoria Library Board has asked its member municipalities to base their per-capita grants toward library costs on 1968 population figures.

If adopted by the various councils, this would give the board additional funds estimated at $28,000.

'ONLY CHANCE'

Library board chairman, Oak Bay Ald. Frances Elford, told a meeting of mayors Monday this was the board's only chance to operate within the $4 per capita budget passed by Saanich council recently.

"If we have to work on the basis of $4 per capita, based on the 1968 population census, we'll have to reduce our book budget very drastically," she said.

"The library board is in a very difficult position. We have to maintain existing facilities, and at the same time establish a branch in Esquimalt this year and one in Oak Bay next year."

The board, she said, was very reluctant to cut back on services the public had come to appreciate.

EFFICIENCY STUDY

Ald. Elford also proposed that an efficiency study of the library operations be conducted by an independent consultant.

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis and Oak Bay Mayor F. W. Hewes said they would take Ald. Elford's request to their councils.

If passed, Saanich would pay an additional $16,000 toward library costs. Victoria's share would be $5,000; Oak Bay's $1,500; Esquimalt's $3,000, and Central Saanich's $2,500.

Oil-Rig Fire Contained

ANCHORAGE (AP)—Fire in an offshore oil platform was controlled late Saturday after raging about six hours on the top deck of the three-storey structure.

Shell Oil Co. spokesmen said no one was hurt, but 45 workmen were evacuated soon after the blaze broke out.

Open-Gambling Idea Rejected by Peterson

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson brushed off a suggestion Monday that B.C. should have a Las Vegas-type gambling centre with proceeds going toward new schools and hospitals.

"I don't think of this province as the California of Canada — not our Nevada," the attorney-general told reporters as he entered a cabinet meeting.

The suggestion was endorsed by the provincial command, Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans in Canada at its quarterly meeting in Vancouver during the weekend. It passed narrowly after an hour and 10 minutes of debate.

Ron Robinson, vice-president of the South Vancouver unit, said his resolution proposed creation of a 24-hour-a-day legal gambling and entertainment centre. All casinos would be under government control, operated by service clubs and with the largest percentage of profit going to the government to be spent on schools and hospitals only.

"The problem with gambling," Mr. Peterson said, "is that it can very easily lead to organized crime and syndicated gambling. For these reasons we don't want it in this province."

"I would hope that schools and hospitals will continue to have other sources of revenue than those derived from gambling," Mr. Peterson said.

Swedish Movie In Court Again

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A federal petition was filed Monday on behalf of the Swedish movie I Am Curious—Yellow which so far has produced one city suit, criticism from the clergy, debate in city council — and long lines of viewers in the city of brotherly love.

The owners and operators in Cinema 19, which opened the nude-and-sex-filled movie Wednesday, asked the federal court to take jurisdiction over a suit which the city filed in common pleas court to halt showing of the film.

Cinema 19 claims since a New York federal court ruled the film was not obscene, a federal court should take jurisdiction in the Philadelphia suit.

Safety First Course For Seniors

A course designed to teach senior citizens how to avoid accidents will be initiated as part of an American program marking May as Senior Citizens' Month.

Officials of the U.S. National Safety Council hope the course will help reduce the number of older people fatally injured each year.

There were nearly 30,000 such deaths in 1968 and many more victims were crippled.

The course, called Handle Yourself With Care, discusses accidents both in and outside the home, with special emphasis on those affecting the senior citizen as driver or pedestrian.

It is intended for use by instructors of accident prevention.

New Canadian Cardinal Formally Takes Office

VATICAN CITY (CP-AP) — Msgr. George Bernard Flahiff, 63, Archbishop of Winnipeg, was formally elevated Monday to the Roman Catholic Church's College of Cardinals, along with 32 other prelates.

Pope Paul confirmed their names in a consistory, at which he said the highest council of Roman Catholicism now "truly includes in a widening circle the nations of the world."

Elevation of the new princes from 19 countries raised membership in the college to an all-time high of 134.

Cardinal Flahiff's elevation at the same time gave Canada its highest number—four. The other three Canadian cardinals are Paul-Emile Leger, formerly archbishop of Montreal and now a missionary in Africa; James McGuigan of Toronto, and Maurice Roy, Archbishop of Quebec.

Four new American cardinals were named bringing to 10 the number of cardinals from the United States, two more than the country ever had.

It was the third consistory for the creation of cardinals in the 71-year-old pope's six-year reign. It was the first time a pontiff ever had created so many cardinals at one time.

It gave cardinals for the first time to South Korea, The Congo-Kinshasa, Madagascar, Guatemala and New Zealand.

It gave the College of Cardinals the widest international representation in the 2,000-year history of the church, and lowered the average age of the cardinals to 68 years from 71.

Pope Paul also:

Press Session

QUEBEC (CP)—The national assembly's committee on freedom of the press is scheduled to hold its first public session May 7.

● Announced establishment of a theological commission to bring theologians of various views together to examine Roman Catholic theology in the light of modern research and scientific developments.

● Announced the issue of a new "Ordo Missae," an altar book on the order of the mass incorporating liturgical changes decreed since the Vatican ecumenical council of 1962-65. It will come out May 2.

● Announced a new calendar of holy days and saints' days. The calendar, to be issued May 9, leaves unchanged celebrations for the church's best-known saints but reserves for local veneration saints whose importance is linked with specific areas.

● Reorganized the Vatican Congregation of Rites into two congregations. One will deal with questions of liturgy. The other will deal only with causes for sainthood.

Prayer May Change

LONDON (Reuters) — Churches of the English-speaking world will be asked to consider a new version of the Lord's Prayer.

Canon Ronald Jasper, one of the joint chairmen of a meeting in London of the International Consultation of English Texts, said Saturday that the future of the new-look-prayer would depend on individual churches.

The proposed text is the result of two or three years' work and meetings held in various parts of the world.

The suggested text: "Our Father in heaven: Glorify Your name. Your kingdom come. Your will be done, on earth as in heaven. Give us today our daily Bread.

Forgive us our sins As we forgive those who sin against us. Save us from the time of trial And deliver us from evil. For the kingdom, the power, and the glory are Yours Now and for ever."

Oregon Scientist Warns:

Northwest Volcanoes Could Erupt

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — Now that the immediate earthquake scare in California appears to be over, those who need something to worry about might ponder the possibility of erupting volcanoes along the West Coast.

D.R. Alexander McBirney, chairman of the geology department at the University of Oregon, says the idea is not at all far-fetched.

EARLY VOLCANO

McBirney is concerned enough to urge that a monitoring program be set up to develop an early volcano warning system for the region.

He estimates cost of such a warning system for the state of Oregon as less than the price of a single fire engine.

McBirney says nearly all eruptions are preceded by seismic shocks large enough to detect but generally unrecorded because they are slight and occur in remote areas. Monitoring this seismic activity is the most promising way to predict eruptions, he believes.

THIS SUMMER

Plans are being made to study seismic activity in mountains of Washington, Oregon and California this summer. An eventual warning system would place seismometers in the mountains with the signals relayed to a central point.

McBirney points out that Mt. Lassen in California erupted

'RECENT TIMES'

Other peaks in the range have erupted within recent times, geologically speaking.

Mt. Lassen and its volcanic national park sit between the communities of Redding and Susanville. The summit of Mt. Hood is little more than 50 miles from downtown Portland.

and suburbs stretch to the foot of the peak. Washington's Mt. Rainier is about 50 miles from Tacoma, less from densely populated suburbs.

"At the stage these volcanoes are in now they become increasingly explosive," McBirney said in an interview. If any of the peaks do blow their tops the debris is expected to be largely in the form of ash rather than lava flows.

McBirney said the danger to populated areas would be primarily from floods created as volcanic activity melted snow on the peaks and from debris carried by the floods.

This summer's work will be aimed at recording the very small shallow earthquakes not normally detected, and at making systematic observations.

Drive it long and hard. All you'll wear out are your driving gloves.

Driving gloves are made to last as long as all those family cars that can't take the family after two years. You know, the ones you see in every used car lot in town.

If you're looking there for a Corona, don't bother. You won't find one till 1971 maybe.

Because Corona is built to take the tough life. The 90 horsepower oversquare engine does zero to 40,000 easily. Cruises at 80 all day.

And won't get you pushed into the 'Slow vehicles keep right' lane going uphill. Unlike some imports we can name.

Just because Corona is built to take the rough life doesn't mean you have to rough it. Corona is thickly carpeted. The vinyl bucket seats recline fully. Three-point seat belts, padded dash and an optional automatic are all part of the soft life inside a Corona.

There's more. Smooth synchromesh four-on-the-floor. Quad headlights. Two-speed wipers. Emergency flashers all make life a little easier. All at no extra cost.

If replacing your driving gloves is a major repair, you must be driving a Corona too.

For Nearly AllNorth Saanich Rate

North Saanich council Monday night set the 1969 mill rate at 16.5 mills, up 1.5 mills from last year.

The budget provides for expenditures of $371,483, with $195,983 coming from taxation. It includes regional hospital costs, but does not include school taxation.

Fire Department Dispute

Sidney Rejects
Capital Outlay

Sidney council Monday night refused to go along with any capital expenditures for the joint Sidney-North Saanich fire department until the current quarrel between the two municipalities is settled.

Council has already endorsed a $21,000 budget to provide for the running costs of the department, but would not endorse a $36,000 budget which would provide for capital outlay.

The recommendation from the joint fire committee was put before council by Ald. W. W. Gardiner, who said it had been passed 3-2 at the committee meeting. He said the three North Saanich delegates had voted in favor, while the two Sidney aldermen opposed it.

TWO MILLS EACH
He said the recommended budget would cost two mills in both districts.

In dispute is $17,124 in capital expenditure, which Ald. Gardiner felt should not be endorsed until there is agreement between the two municipalities. "At the moment North Saanich is in complete control, and Sidney is contributing money without building up any assets," he said.

LIGHT REQUESTED
The full budget was endorsed by North Saanich council at a meeting Monday night.

Meanwhile, the Sidney and North Saanich joint fire committee has written to the provincial traffic safety commission asking for a warning light before the intersection of Beacon Avenue with the Patricia Bay Highway.

City Hall
Smoking

Victoria fire trucks rushed to City Hall at 10:25 p.m. Monday following a report of smoke billowing from the clock tower.

The fire department said the smoke probably came from the hall's chimney, releasing smoke from an incinerator where papers were being burned.

Clubmen Flying
Anyway

Members of the Union Club and the Racquet Club who planned a charter flight to Britain Thursday, then wondered about the effect of the Air Canada strike, are to get the trip after all.

Stan Mooney, Air Canada's sales manager in Victoria, reported Monday the strikebound line had finally found another operator to take on the flight.

The charter will leave Vancouver International Airport on its original schedule, leaving at 8:35 p.m. Thursday and arriving at London at 2 p.m. Friday.

The provincial Pollution Control Board served notice Monday that Greater Victoria municipalities would have to treat sewage discharged into the sea at all but one of the proposed locations — the probable exception being Macaulay Point.

After a quick glance, Mayor Hugh Stephen of Victoria sized it up as a "totally irrational decision."

His concern was Clover Point, which he felt was the same as Macaulay Point and should not be faced with different restrictions.

'AN EXPERIMENT'
Health Minister Ralph Lofmark called the Macaulay Point decision "an exception and an experiment."

The views followed a long-sought decision from the Pollution Control Board — the decision to grant a permit for construction of a minimum 4,800-foot outfall at Macaulay Point.

A treatment plant will have to be built if the outlet fails to prevent pollution.

PERMIT PLEASING
However, like Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich and Mayor Ray Bryant of Esquimalt, he was happy to learn the Pollution Control Board had granted the permit.

The permit, issued to the Capital Region District Board, calls for an outfall the same length sought by the board when its application was made last November.

Enough land must be retained for construction of a treatment plant.

SPELLS NEED
A policy statement released by the Pollution Control Board classes all other Victoria-Saanich Peninsula outlets with Clover Point, spelling out the need of treatment facilities in each case.

In an interview Monday night, Mr. Lofmark said this would include "everything from the east side of Victoria Harbor to Brentwood Bay."

He called the Macaulay Point plan an "exception and an experiment," adding: "If it doesn't work out, the treatment plant will have to go up."

SOME DIFFERENCE
Mr. Lofmark said he felt there was a difference in the Macaulay Point and Clover Point outlets. He said the board had been assured there was a "good tide" off Macaulay Point.

"And there is more activity — more recreation — near Clover Point," he said.

Said Mayor Curtis: "I find this (the permit) most acceptable."

WANT CRITICIZED
He was a little critical of the five-month wait for the Pollution Control Board's decision, as were the other mayors.

But he said he was "hopeful the way is cleared now for the regional board, in partnership with the Pollution Control Board, to get the pipes in the ground — which is the real purpose."

Mayor Curtis is chairman of the Regional District sewers committee.

NOT TOO CONCERNED
Mayor Bryant said he wasn't too concerned about the policy statement on the other outlets because "the government has changed its mind before."

He didn't feel the Pollution Control Board had sufficient evidence before it to make judgment where the other outlets were concerned. Most of the evidence it had studied applied only to Macaulay Point, since this was the only permit sought at the time, he said.

He said he was "very pleased" with the Macaulay Point decision.

LIMITATIONS
The Pollution Control Board warns treatment will be required if, in the estimate of provincial health authorities, working in conjunction with the Pollution Control Board, the method of disposal creates a health hazard or if the outfall fails otherwise to meet prescribed standards.

The board's statement added: "In connection with the issuance of sewage outfall permits, the Pollution Control Board observes that the proposed sewage outfall reconstruction by the city of Victoria at Clover Point will require the inclusion of treatment facilities."

Extended-Care Distribution

Allocation of 350 Beds Deferred

Allocation of 350 extended-care beds was recommended Monday to the Capital Region Hospital Board, but the board is awaiting comments from Dr. Harvey Agnew before making a final decision.

Following the hospital advisory committee's proposals, the executive committee recommended that extended-care beds be allocated as follows:

- Royal Jubilee Hospital — 150 beds.
- Mount St. Mary Hospital — 150 beds.
- St. Mary's Priory — 50 beds.

The committee's recommendation differed sharply from recommendations outlined in last year's Agnew, Peckham report, which suggested that Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospitals be allocated 30 extended-care beds each, while the bulk should go to St. Mary's Priory.

The $43,000 study also recommended that hospitals be decentralized.

After a long and heated discussion, the board decided to table the matter and ask Dr. Agnew for his opinion on the committee's recommendations.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said he was "quite shaken" by the recommendation. Not only was it in complete disagreement with the Agnew, Peckham report, but it also tended to mess medical services in one area.

"Where was this information last year? Where was it up to now? Why the sudden switch away from the Agnew, Peckham study?" Mayor Curtis asked.

The information he was referring to was furnished by A. W. E. Pitkethley, hospital consultant and adviser of the committee.

"Often an extended-care patient will need acute-care facilities, or he may need the attendance of a doctor in a hurry. The location of extended-care beds in the immediate proximity of acute-care beds is practised in many communities and has worked out to everybody's satisfaction," Mr. Pitkethley said.

Langford representative Earl Pallister said it didn't make sense to locate extended-care facilities in the most congested parts of the city.

The Langford-Colwood-Metchosin-Sooke area, he said, should have received proper consideration. The district's growth over the past few years had been fantastic.

Victoria Medical Society President Dr. Paul Gareau said Monday night that the society deplores the fact that because of ill-advised press reports the objective recommendations of the hospital board's advisory committee had not been accepted.

The Medical Society, he said, has confidence in the committee, and also in the decisions of the regional hospital board, when the decisions were based on committee recommendations.

Mental Institute Costs

The Capital Regional Hospital Board decided unanimously Monday to provide a one-time $63,000 grant to Royal Jubilee Hospital toward operating costs of the Eric Martin Institute.

The funds were made available with the understanding that they did not constitute a precedent, and Royal Jubilee could not expect future grants.

The hospital asked for $135,000, but the board's executive committee recommended a trimmed-down figure because no more than a quarter-mill levy may be imposed for this purpose. The committee based its recommendation for the grant on the fact space for acute-care beds was made available as a result of the institute's operation.

The board also approved a $10,000 grant so that St. Joseph's Hospital can prepare a feasibility study of building a new hospital on the property adjacent to its present facilities.

A letter from the board said the study would envisage construction of a 640-bed acute care hospital and a 150- to 200-bed extended-care hospital. Cost of the study was estimated at between $9,000 and $10,000.

Mayor Runs, Baird Won't

'Iffy' Candidate
Blasts Hall Idea

Victoria Ald. Robert Baird said Monday that, if he is elected mayor in December, he will oppose the CPR's proposal for a $2,400,000 convention centre tied in with the Empress Hotel.

He said this would be a major point in his platform in the forthcoming mayoral race. He also said he would not contest the seat if Mayor Hugh Stephen should seek re-election.

Ald. Baird said the CPR would go ahead with the convention centre even if the city turned the offer down. "They are a big corporation, and they know where they can make money. They'd go ahead regardless."

He said it was wrong to spend taxpayers' money on a convention centre tied to a commercial enterprise.

Under the CPR's proposal, the city would build the centre at a cost of $2,400,000. The Empress Hotel would take over exclusive catering facilities and would supply the centre with heat from its existing plant. The land would be sold to the city for $1 an acre.

"I know this seems like a good opportunity for the city to get a convention centre, but I think it's the wrong way to go about it," Ald. Baird said.

The early contender for the mayoral race, who has gained a reputation for fierce opposition to the hippie element, outlined his platform in an interview Monday night.

Other points in his platform:

- Oppose the CPR's proposal for a $2,400,000 convention centre to be tied in with the Empress Hotel.
- Oppose Sunday entertainment but support Sunday sports.
- Push for amalgamation of the four main municipalities — Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.
- Support the forthcoming five-year plan for the city's capital expenditures.
- He said many services were being duplicated at the moment.
- "It's the elimination of that duplication I'm striving for. We'd just have one council, one fire chief, one police chief," he said.
- "Victoria would amalgamate tomorrow, but I expect a lot of opposition from the other municipalities."
- The five-year capital expenditure plan, which will go before the voters in June, is a "masterpiece of planning," in Ald. Baird's opinion.

THE ESSENTIALS

"It contains all the essential work to be done over the next five years in the fields of sewage, road repair traffic and other civic expenditures," he said.

"It will cost the taxpayer about $7,800,000, but it will be worth every penny."

The last five-year capital expenditure projection called for a spending of about $5,000,000.

Reynolds High Addition

Many Rooms
Stay Unused

By BILL STAYDAL

Hard-pressed for classroom space, Greater Victoria school district has a $400,000 addition to Reynolds high school lying empty because it was finished late.

School officials have decided

it's too late in the term to transfer Grade 11 students from Mount Douglas high, so the 10 classrooms, three workshops and a library won't be occupied until September.

The irony of idle classrooms in a school district bursting at the seams is only the latest of many headaches for school planners.

IN SEPTEMBER

Opened in September, 1967, the $909,000 Reynolds high already had an addition planned. It was to have accommodated Grade 11 last fall, but there wasn't space, so the class went to Mt. Douglas.

An addition begun in July, 1968, was hoped for completion by January of this year. The district planned to transfer Grade 11s from crowded Mt. Douglas.

But a month of harsh weather added to a delay that saw the school expansion finished during the Easter holiday.

"It wouldn't make sense to move all those Grade 11s with only six weeks to go," district superintendent Joseph Chell said Monday.

Once-a-Week Outing

Wheelchair Patient
Needs Assistance

An afternoon outing once a week means more to Norman Lidster of Mount St. Mary's Hospital than it does to most people.

A patient at the hospital for 21 years, the blind Mr. Lidster is confined to a full-length wheelchair and can go out only if he finds someone to push him once a week—preferably Tuesday or Sunday.

The hospital has received some offers from youngsters, but would prefer an adult because of the size of the chair.

Mr. Lidster listens to many radio programs and tape-recorded books and enjoys discussing politics, literature, broadcasting, shipping and practically all topics.

The person who used to push Mr. Lidster on his walks is no longer able to do so, and he has not been out much recently.

"I miss the park and the sea breeze," he said.

Hovercraft Runs
Start Wednesday

The Air Canada strike is bringing hovercraft service to Greater Victoria more than a month ahead of schedule.

Beginning Wednesday, Pacific Hovercraft Ltd. will operate one return trip daily between Vancouver and Sidney.

The company's vice-president, Byne Heaney of Vancouver, said the early start was the result of a rash of phone calls.

The schedule calls for 11:30 a.m. Vancouver departure, 12:50 p.m. arrival near the Anacortes ferry dock, 1:15 p.m. Sidney departure and 2:25 p.m. Vancouver arrival.

Mr. Heaney said the craft would be met at Sidney by a Vancouver Island Coach Lines bus, which will take passengers to downtown Victoria. One-way fare, including bus, is $12.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Please excuse the mistakes in this letter. I can't see very well. I have two black eyes and a broken nose, which is why I'm writing.

My husband hits me a lot but it's always an accident. Usually it happens when Mike is helping me, like a good husband. This last thing was the worst. We were putting away the week's groceries. Mike was standing on a ladder and I was handing him the canned goods. A canned ham fell on my face. The bleeding wouldn't stop so Mike drove me to the hospital. The doctor said my nose was broken.

Two months ago Mike was mopping the floors. He forgot to tell me the bucket was behind me. I stepped in it, fell and broke three ribs. A week before that, Mike was vacuuming the living room. His elbow caught me in the mouth and I lost a front tooth.

Cleaning Woman Cheaper?

A friend who teaches psychology told me Freud said there are no accidents. What she means is Mike does these things on purpose. Is this possible? I think she is jealous because I have such a nice husband and she is 33 and still teaching school. Please comment.—Riverside.

Dear Riv. It's interesting that all the accidents occur when Mike is performing domestic chores. I might be that subconsciously he resents doing house-work. So why don't you excuse him in the future or hire a cleaning lady.

ERMA BOMBECK in the Attic

Cardboard Vases Glitter

By ERMA BOMBECK

"Let's get one thing straight," I said. "When you're cleaning out an attic, you've got to be ruthless."

I was saying this because (a) it was my mother-in-law's attic, (b) my five-day deodorant pad was up at 3 p.m., and (c) I had swept through and watched the "goodies" two years ago.

"Can't we save these?" asked one child.

"Sure," I snapped. "In case they start rationing, we'll have enough stamps for two pairs of shoes and eight pounds of sugar."

I surveyed the heap with dismay. Why do people store a shoebox of melted poker chips, a theatre bill of Ethel Merman in Annie Get Your Gun, a passbook for a defunct bank, a receipt for porch awnings in 1943, application (complete with fingerprints) as an air raid warden, a lock of hair wrapped in a paper napkin, a half box of corn plasters and a waterglass of marbles?

The instructions were cold and complete, "Toss it."

That included the eight lids with no bottoms, a canister with a complete line of spices that were 20 years old, a razor strop, a carton of 78 rpm records, a large sack of castors, the first electric mixer ever made and doll's body with no head.

"Toss it!" ... the urn with the crack in it, the boy's coat with the belted back, the melted candles, the Christmas cards from a decade ago, the baby books blank but for a name, the membership in the Eagle's lodge.

Then I saw it. A small note that belied the original cold dismissal of all that was in the attic. It read, "Erma: Save these. Love."

At first glance, they were two cardboard pots, clumsily made from an oatmeal box and covered with watery red paint. At second glance, they were indeed two cardboard pots, clumsily made from an oatmeal box and covered with watery red paint. On the bottom of one read, "To Dad," on the other, "I love you, Mother."

Crumpled in the bottom were the remains of flowers that had dried and turned to powder.

Jet-Black RCMP Mare

Gift Pleases Queen

LONDON (CP)—The Queen Monday personally welcomed a new Canadian member of the royal household—a jet-black mare from Saskatchewan, gift of the RCMP.

The presentation was made by Solicitor-General George McInnis and watched by RCMP Commissioner M. Franklin Lindsay, High Commissioner Charles Ritchie and Mrs. Ritchie and other dignitaries.

A mounted troop of five RCMP members, in Britain as part of a contingent of the musical ride, assembled on the lawn of Windsor Castle headed by S. Sgt. Ralph Cave of Ottawa on the presentation horse, Burmese, a seven-year-old mare specially bred for the musical ride at Fort Walsh, Sask.

The Queen came down the steps from the castle terrace accompanied by McInnis and Lindsay.

Cave dismounted and held Burmese's bridle while McInnis made the presentation.

Lindsay then explained the horse's pedigree. The Queen listened and appraised Burmese with a horsewoman's eye. "It is very generous of you," the Queen told Lindsay as Cave finished his exhibition ride.

Cave said the Queen had been impressed with the horse and asked how the breeders got her so black.

Burmese was a leading file horse in the musical ride which will shortly open a tour of British fairs and tattoos.

A royal equerry said the horse will initially be stabled at Windsor. The Queen rides almost daily and it is likely that she and Princess Anne will ride Burmese, the equerry said.

Parents Lost

Fund Collected To Aid Family

A fund is being collected for the children of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Szegedi, 734 Cowper, whose fishboat was found burned and beached last week near Port Renfrew.

The body of Mrs. Liv Szegedi was found floating in the sea nearby but hope was abandoned of finding Mr. Szegedi's body.

Mr. Szegedi worked for Speedway Motors for five years before going fishing, and his friends and co-workers have started a fund for his children.

Salesman Ernest Law of Speedway said Monday that cash donations are being received at the garage, 971 Yates.

Receipts will be given for all donations, he said, and those mailed in should be sent in care of Mr. Law and marked for the Szegedi children.

The couple left six children — Charles, 23, a commercial fisherman like his father; John, 15; Sonya, 13; David, 10; Julie, 6 and Helen, 5.

Woman Killed by Plane While Hanging Wash

MECHANICSBURG, Pa. (UPI)—A woman was struck and killed by a small, private plane Sunday while hanging out some clothing on a line at her home in nearby Hampden township.

Police said Margaret Ann Verneky was struck by a plane operated by Judy Anne Doncevic, 23, a student pilot from Harrisburg, who was taking off from a nearby airport when the accident happened. The plane then plowed into a house occupied by Derrick Eagle and his family. Miss Doncevic and the Eagle family escaped injury.

Fur Length Fixed

Coats Show Bit of Boot

By EUGENIA SHEPPARD

NEW YORK — Next year's fur coat will be 10 inches off the pavement, no more and no less. It will be just short enough to show a bit of leather boots with chunky, 2½-inch heels.

If anything can make a woman mad for a new fur coat in April, it's the collection Emile Potos showed at Bergdorf Goodman.

While he was designing his coats, Potos juggled the hemline up and down before he settled on 10 above. It's right for a woman of any height. At least six coats in the new length appeared in the show, but the most unforgettable were the jacquard, cut in one piece, and the white made of the same heavy fabric that covers ironing boards. Under it was what Potos calls a "snugg-in" sable lining. The skinny, sleeveless sable, decorated with sable tails was unattached to the coat and could be worn alone with the tweed slacks.

"Sable should be worn only with tweed," says Potos. It sounds like the one about mink and football.

As fur designers go, Greek Potos is the most far-out in the most expensive field, and the most willing to put fashion into priceless furs.

One of the truths to face is that every woman who wears pants will need a new fur coat to go over them next year. The only coat that's a bomb is the one that was made for dresses.

Potos suggests everything from the 10-above to a shoulder cape of white mink for a black jumpsuit. One of his most dashing looks for over pants or leotards is the hip-length coat straight out of the Three Musketeers. Out circular, it is wildly flaring and free. Three degrees of flare provided by Potos are to be regulated by the customer's own personal flare.

Potos designs everything under his furs including the pants. He has his own ideas about what ladies' pants should look like. His are straight, narrow, not more than 15 inches wide, and cuffed. Naturally, he does the pants suit in silk, black broadtail.

Potos has a whole series of Intarsia furs in mink checks and plains, but everybody knows he can do them. His encrusted flowers, taken from '30s fashions are new.

He uses them on Spanish evening shawls of pale mink, cut with a deep point in back. Imagine an off-white mink shawl outlined in red mink anemones and green mink leaves, over a silver gray jersey evening dress.

It's the only way to look.

Koenig says the judgments of women are "no more infallible than those of any segregated group."

The non-profit group will provide background information on candidates and issues to voters on a nonpartisan basis.

The League of Men Voters plans to be more democratic in one respect than the female organization. They will allow the opposite sex to participate through an auxiliary.

To Look At, Not Look Like

Montreal Designer Clings to Femininity

MONTREAL (CP) — At least one Canadian designer has scored the unisex trend and is creating clothes for women who want men to look at them instead of look like them.

Claire Haddad of Toronto Monday showed leisure and at-home wear that was carefree for mornings, elegant in the evenings and overwhelmingly feminine all the time.

Nearly every costume had pants, but they were silk and crepe see-through items topped with lace or sheer floor-length robes that floated and swirled about the ankles in clever disguise.

Colors ran the gamut from a lime green lace cape over matching crepe pants to a white silk culottes and overskirt embroidered in gold and silver lurex thread.

Carrying through from noon to midnight was a pale yellow floor-length empire gown with thin straps and a bodice trimmed in white daisies.

One flick of the wrist and the skirt, attached to the daisy-trimmed top with a strip of velcro, ripped away to reveal very skimpy bikini pants, also sporting a few daisies.

The Oriental influence was apparent in two flowing caftans — one in black and white printed silk accented with magenta, the other in golden-yellow silk bordered in mauve paisley.

Chains and bangles wrapped around waists, necks, ankles, thighs and arms — in fact anywhere but around the wrist.

Sheer white wool rapidly becoming a trademark of Miss Haddad, was used in two pant outfits, one covered by a floor-length fringe-trimmed Roman toga and the other topped with an above-the-knees kimono-style jacket.

What is probably the world's most glamorous gymnast turned up in black, powder blue or beige loosely-woven leotards, dressed up with sheer balloon wrist-length sleeves and stretchy harem pants.

Completing the collection were two fragile white robes trimmed with lace. One was in flowing silk, the other in short-sleeved, empire-waisted Swiss voile.

Few Billboards 'Not So Bad'

BOSTON (AP) — In announcing a crackdown on billboard advertising, Governor Francis Sargent admitted that not all such signs are in bad taste. "When I was campaigning the last time, there were certain billboards in the state that I liked to look at."

A Lovelier You

Teen Nail Answer Water Clears

By MARY SUE MILLER

Listen and you shall hear how the teen crowd is up-tight about flashy cosmetics. Excepting eye makeup and false eyelashes, that is!

Even in these days when the cosmetic password is "sheer," girls look around for nail polish that you can see through and shine through. Anything that looks as though it doesn't belong to a girl's fingertips is out. And rightly so.

Laden with unnatural paint, young hands appear juvenile. Like little sister playing dress-up in mother's clothes.

Yet, it doesn't do for pretty girls in pretty getups to go around with grubby little-brother hands. Many a hand would be improved by some sophisticated grooming — daily brush-scuffs, oceans of lotion and weekly manicures.

And here's where water clear nail enamel could work wonders to protect the nails from grime and injury, and to prolong the finish of manicures. Why, that way you'd always have nice hands. But, you ask, what are water clears? Well, think of looking through pale-tinted cellophanes. The effect is that liquid, lucid and clear. It's your own thing — a born-beautiful nail with healthy color and natural sheen. And, by the way, the feel is incredibly weightless. No iron-maiden nails!

There's sheer lipstick to match or blend. But of course! And here is an old adage that you can apply to most beauty problems: Seek and ye shall find.

Prairie Chicken Caused Crash

OLATHE, Kan. (AP) — The United States Navy says a prairie chicken probably caused the crash of a multi-million dollar A-6A Intruder jet bomber at the Onizuka Naval Air Station April 12. Investigators said remains of the chicken were found in a jet engine after the plane faltered on take-off, flipped over in mud at the end of the runway and caught fire.

Last Dogteam Lap Called Off Early

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — The last lap of the last RCMP and Special Constable Peter Benjamin made two stops at Fort McPherson to rest themselves and their dogs.

The dog patrols are being abandoned because of use of motor toboggans and aircraft. On the last patrol the dogs suffered cut feet on the icy trail and one animal had to be destroyed. The lap was out after the patrol reached Arctic Red River and headed through the Richardson mountains.

At one point they had to travel through water which had covered the ice. Then they had to set the dogs loose to find their way down a precipice while the men lowered the toboggans and supplies with a rope.

The temperature went down to 41 below zero one day and on March 20-21 the men were holed-up in camp because of high winds which tore their tent loose.

Because of the dogs' condition, it was decided to eliminate the last lap and return to Old Crow on the trail they had already broken.

NEW DATSUN 1600 at DAVID MOTORS

IS THE MOST POWERFUL ECONOMY CAR IN ITS CLASS

96 h.p., 100 m.p.h., 30-35 m.p.g.
Now you have a choice of three Datsun 1600s: the sporty new 4-door, a de luxe 4-door and de luxe family wagon. In its price class, only Datsun 1600 gives you a high-performance 1600 cc overhead cam engine that's good for 94 h.p. and 100 m.p.h. It means great pick-up and all-day cruising at 70 m.p.h. And all the time you'll get 30-35 miles per gallon with either 4-on-the-floor stick shift or the 3-speed automatic.

engineered for safety
The new Datsun 1600 is probably the safest economy car you can own. It has a specially designed impact-absorbing body and great road-holding with an all-independent suspension system. Safety features include: disc brakes up front (now with the double protection of twin master cylinders), collapsible steering column, headrests, belt/shoulder harnesses, 4 headlamps, padded dash and interior fittings, and more.

quiet and comfortable
The Datsun 1600 has "windows up" ventilation. Fresh air streams in through adjustable ventilators on the dash, cowlings, and side air is automatically exhausted through rear vents. The sound-deadening heater/defroster keeps you warm and your windows clear through the coldest winters. There are more than 130 Datsun dealers coast-to-coast and $1,600,000 in parts to back you.

Apollo 10

'Oversight' Delays Test

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — The U.S. Space Agency reported Monday several thousand gallons of kerosene accidentally poured out of the Apollo 10 moon rocket when technicians overlooked the possibility while fixing ground equipment.

Engineers drained the rest of the fuel from the Saturn 5 rocket's massive first stage to see if the accident damaged the booster. A spokesman said the inspection was "a precautionary measure."

TEST DELAYED

The mishap delayed the start of a critical, week-long countdown test 24 hours, until today. Barring disclosure of damage to the rocket, the May 18 launch date for astronauts Thomas Stafford, John Young and Eugene Cernan will not be affected.

The trouble developed when technicians Sunday cut off the nitrogen gas pressurization system in the first stage to repair a leak in the gas system on the Saturn's launch stand.

A set of valves in pipes feeding kerosene to the booster's five engines are normally held closed by nitrogen pressure. When pressurization was stopped, the valves opened.

"That possibility apparently was overlooked," said a Space Agency spokesman.

Man Weeps Over Record

A man with a criminal record that went back to 1920 burst into tears when it was read Tuesday in Central Magistrate's court.

Leonard K. Cole of Nanaimo put his hands over his eyes and sobbed during recounting of the long record of false pretences and fraud.

"There is something wrong. I don't know what it is," the 66-year-old man told Magistrate William Ostler.

FOUR COUNTS

He pleaded guilty to four counts of false pretences in Victoria. He is also charged with false pretences and theft in Nanaimo and obtaining lodgings under false pretences in Duncan.

"You have been going for a long time," said Magistrate Ostler, remanding him until Wednesday for a psychiatric report.

Thomas was sentenced to six months to a year. He had previous convictions of contributing to juvenile delinquency and dangerous driving.

Claude Belanger, already a prisoner in Colquitz Jail, pleaded guilty to six counts of fraud.

RCMP Constable William Ericson told the court Belanger had been working for the unemployment insurance office in St. Jean, Que., and had admitted receiving several cheques totalling $362 from the mail.

The 25-year-old Belanger had a long history of fraud and false pretences.

"You have committed an astonishing amount of criminal activity in a short period," said Magistrate Ostler and remanded Belanger until Tuesday for sentence.

Substantial bail was asked by the crown for Joseph James Thomas of 80 Admirals Road, charged with breaking and entering and theft, and theft over $50.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett called for bail of $2,000, while Thomas' counsel, Rodney Beavan, said he would have trouble raising $1,000.

Thomas is charged with breaking into the Christie Point Service Shell Service Station, 112 Island Highway and stealing a car.

Magistrate Ostler set bail at $1,500, and remanded him until Wednesday.

"It sounds as though you are in real trouble," Magistrate Ostler told Michael Fletcher of 1209 Pearce, and fined him $250 on a charge of failing to remain at the scene of an accident, $50 on a charge of consuming liquor in a public place, $25 for being a minor with no car insurance, and $15 for being a minor in possession of liquor.

Eldridge Gordon Whynt of 100 Argyle was fined $450 on a charge of impaired driving and $250 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident. He pleaded guilty.

Court was told that at 1:30 a.m. Sunday he crossed a double solid line on Esquimalt Road near Macaulay Point and struck a westbound car. His breath test showed .24 per cent blood alcohol.

"It was a miracle you didn't kill someone when you were in that condition," said Magistrate Ostler.

Budget Spending at New High

Property, Water Rates Increase in Nanaimo

NANAIMO — Increases in the municipal real estate tax rate, the water rate and the assessment base for improvements were passed by Nanaimo Council Monday night to help pay for record expenditures of $5,280,223 in the next fiscal year.

The increases were contained in the new budget presented by finance committee chairman Ald. Gertrude Hall.

Ald. Hall said the municipal real estate rate was being increased by 4.9 mills to 82.35 mills, or 6.38 per cent.

SCHOOL RATE

She said this did not include a school rate increase of .79 mill or a regional hospital reduction of .31 mill.

Ald. Hall said water rates would be increased 20 per cent effective July 1.

She said the assessment base for improvements would be raised to 75 per cent from 30 per cent.

She said this was the same base now used for school taxes.

Ald. Hall said wage increases spread throughout various city departments were one reason taxes had to be increased. She said another reason was a loss to the city of $20,000 annually in police court fines as a result of the driving demerit system.

She pointed out that in Nanaimo's case, the provincial per capita grant increase of $3, totalling $45,564, did not offset general increases in Nanaimo expenses.

As an example, she said welfare spending increases, added to the fact the city now had to pay 20 per cent of costs instead of 10 per cent as in 1968 meant a $46,400 increase in welfare costs.

An increase in the debt charges over last year was responsible for 3.03 mills of the rate increase, she said.

Mayor Frank Ney said that despite the increases, more than 50 per cent of Nanaimo ratepayers would be paying less than $100 a year after the homeowner grant.

He noted that although the city had power to borrow up to $7,000,000 only $3,000,000 had been borrowed.

WATER RATES

Before the budget was presented, Greater Nanaimo water district chief commissioner A. W. MacDonald told council the rates charged by the district to the city would have to increase.

Mr. MacDonald explained that the water district's administration board, at a recent meeting, felt a two-cent per thousand-gallon levy to the city, based on the wholesale price of water, was necessary to build a reserve fund for capital projects. It was necessitated because of unfavourable debenture market conditions.

Based on 1968 consumption, Mr. MacDonald said, the levy increase would have raised $23,678.92, charged against the 1,183,946,000 gallons used by all participating districts.

School Trustees Meet

District Merger Scheme Going for Investigation

NANAIMO — Island school boards will investigate the pros and cons of amalgamation before committing themselves to any action.

This was the decision of a meeting Sunday of the Island branch of the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

The department of education has begun encouraging amalgamations among B.C.'s 35 school districts, though no marriages have yet taken place.

Sunday's discussion of the subject ended quickly on the motion of Saanich board chairman Mrs. Ruby May Parrott that trustees seek full information from the department and from the BCSTA head office in Vancouver.

The Saanich board is already scheduled to discuss amalgamation with a department official May 6.

Both Saanich and Sooke school boards have rejected the idea of amalgamation with Greater Victoria for the time being at least.

Cowichan and Lake Cowichan districts are reportedly considering union.

Last October the BCSTA annual convention adopted the policy that any amalgamation should produce educational improvement and money savings, and should take into account geographic factors and preserve local autonomy.

The Sunday branch meeting followed a seminar on school district management that began Friday evening.

During a brief meeting on Sunday, members appointed Alex Smith of Yellow Point as a life member. Mr. Smith, who first became a school board member in the Ladysmith area in 1955 was the fifth person to be appointed to life membership.

B.C. Nature Council

Strong Curbs Urged To Plug Oil Spilling

COMOX — The B.C. Nature Council will ask the provincial and federal governments to adopt "the strongest possible measures" to prevent and control oil spills from offshore drilling and tankers.

The request was passed as a resolution at the council's annual meeting Saturday.

Newly-elected second vice-president Elton Anderson of Victoria said in a statement to the press that "spills from offshore drilling are much more numerous than is generally realized."

Many have occurred in Cook Inlet in Alaska, and the operations of Shell Oil there were threatened with a shutdown by the state because the situation was so bad. Hundreds (of spills) have also occurred off the California coast. Indeed, one sizeable company at Long Beach lives solely by cleaning up such spills.

Mr. Anderson said the value of commercial development is "not to be denied, but the present policy of permitting natural resources to be exploited for a single purpose with little or no reference to the needs of the community as a whole ... is damaging our environment in many ways."

In other business, the council voted to incorporate under the Societies Act as the Federation of B.C. Naturalists. A full range of individual and corporate memberships would be made available, the council said, under the new organization.

Conservationist Hugh Monahan of Vancouver was elected president of the council for a two-year term. Dr. T. M. C. Taylor of Victoria is first vice-president and Peg Briault of Vancouver continues as secretary.

Birth of a Lawn

I wrote a piece a couple of weeks ago about the construction and seeding of a new lawn. If these instructions were followed, the young grass seedlings are just about due to put in an appearance.

I don't know of any experience in gardening quite as exciting as that first glimpse of green film on a newly seeded lawn.

It is rather like the very lightest veiling of acorn on a green pond — not grass, not moss, and certainly nothing so definite as a blade — only the faintest green tinge, a suspicion and a hope, which hardens into delightful certainty as the days go by.

Such new lawns require very careful treatment the first year. No matter how carefully the ground was prepared, some weeds are bound to appear, and unless they are removed by hand in the seedling stage, they will be difficult to deal with later on. Chemical weedkillers are no use, for these must never be applied until the grass is well established.

Weeding should start when the grass is about 1½ inches high, and the soil should be just nicely moist — neither bone dry nor sloppy wet — when this operation is performed. On dry soil, many of the weeds will snap off just under the surface when pulled, leaving the root in the ground to sprout again. On the other hand, when the ground is too wet, you'll find yourself pulling up large clods of soil, each filled with precious grass seedlings.

Use a little care in getting about on your new lawn. Probably the best method is to use wide boards you can kneel on, to avoid bruising the grass. Weeding should be done systematically, marking off a yard-wide strip with a couple of garden lines, and clearing up all the weeds in one lane before moving on to the next.

You will probably encounter the odd bare patch as you weed. Treat these as you go, stirring the surface with a table fork, scattering a pinch of grass seed, and covering with a layer of fine soil.

The first cutting is done when the grass reaches 2½ inches in height, and only one inch of tip is removed. If your lawn is very small, you could do the job with a pair of shears. If larger, use a lawn mower which is very sharp, well lubricated and in first class condition.

The sidewheel and hand mower isn't the best implement in the world for this first cut, for if there is the slightest drag on the wheels, they'll gouge ugly ruts in the new grass. A rotary power mower is good if the blade is really sharp, or a motor-driven, rubber-tired reel-type mower. The only hand-powered mower I would use on a new lawn is one of the Atco type, where the reel is driven by a chain from the wide roller rather than geared to side heels.

Some lawn seed mixtures contain a proportion of coarse, strong-growing grasses which protect the finer and slower varieties while they are getting established. If you examine your new lawn carefully, you may see the fine grass about an inch high, while the coarser blades will be about 2½ inches tall.

This is why the first mowing should take off no more than a one-inch tip — to reduce the shading effect of the coarse temporary grass and leaving the permanent blades untouched.

For the second mowing, about a week later, use your mower but keep it adjusted high to again only one-inch tip is removed. Thereafter it may be treated as an established lawn, although it should never be cut really close during its first year of life. No weedkillers should be used for at least six weeks after the first cut.

ART BUGHWALD

No Publicity, No Fun

There is some question as to what role the communications media are playing in student unrest. Most of us like to think we're just reporting the events on college campuses, but there is a gnawing suspicion that our role may be one of participants rather than observers.

Have you ever wondered what might happen if the Press and TV didn't show up at a student demonstration? Twenty-five students are standing on the steps of the law building.

"Olely guys, we're taking the building. Is everybody ready for the attack?"

"We better hold off; the TV cameras haven't arrived yet."

"Who was supposed to alert the TV stations?"

"I did alert them. I said we were going to look ourselves in at noon. They said they were covering the flower show at the Coliseum and they didn't have any cameras available."

"That's a hell of a note. It's just like the bourgeois, racist, capitalistic TV media to ignore the revolution. What do we do now?"

"Let's take the building anyway."

"What good will it do? There are no press photographers or newspapermen here either."

"Where are they?"

"I called up the papers and told them what we were going to do and they said they were too busy to cover another student takeover of a building. They said it wasn't news anymore."

"Did you tell them we were going to tear and feather the dean of the law school?"

"Yeh, and they said to send them a press release on it."

"Where's the reporter from the school newspaper?"

"The school newspaper said they didn't have any student to spare for our demonstration, but they'd get a fill-in later from one of us."

"Boy, this isn't much fun. Hey, here comes a guy with a camera. UP AGAINST THE WALL! UP AGAINST THE WALL! THE UNIVERSITY IS A FASCIST CESSPOOL."

"I beg your pardon?"

"Who are you shooting the film for, man?"

"My cinema class. Would you mind doing that again?"

"Get out of here."

"Somebody's got to come. What about the radio stations?"

"No dice. They said we could call in on their telephone talk show if we wanted to, but they're not sending anyone over."

"There's got to be some law that the press has to cover a student riot."

"If I had known nobody was going to be here, I wouldn't have missed my lunch hour."

"I want to read my speech telling why we are taking over the law building."

"Who cares? You wrote it for the press. As long as they're not showing up, spare us."

"I say we should take over the law building anyway."

"What good will it do? Nobody will know we did it."

"It could keep us in practice."

"Why are you coming your hair?"

"Well, if nobody's going to take my picture, I might as well go to English class."

"Wait. Don't go. Let's make new demands to the administration."

"Such as?"

"It's the administration's responsibility to see that our student demonstrations are covered by the press and TV media, and if they don't provide adequate coverage the university has three hours to live."

"Let's hurry. I promised my parents I'd be on TV tonight."

SYDNEY HARRIS

Thinking Aloud

People complain of their busy-ness, that "there is so much to be done" that we do not have "time to live" — but how many, relieved of this busy-ness, would take time to live, would know what it is, would become more than they are now, rather than less? Leisure, to be tolerable, calls for more talent than work does.

What we define as "history" is mostly a record written by the winners, whose version of events has become standardized, while the losers' story is buried in the debris of conquest or annihilation.

To pursue the same time policies of armament and disarmament, as the U.S. is doing, is as futile and contradictory as trying to find a common cure for malaria. The liberation of man as an absolute ideal leads only to man's self-destruction.

It is a sign of national megalomania (as George Orwell points out) that each country colors the world map with its own territory and possessions in red.

Speaking of Orwell, I am going through the new four volumes of his collected letters, essays and journalism, and heartily recommend them to every journalist and "communications" school, both for clarity of writing and honesty of mind.

Perhaps the most pregnant passage in modern writing is compressed in one paragraph of Bonhoeffer's Ethics, where he says: "The demand for absolute liberty brings men to the depths of slavery. The master of the machine becomes its slave. The creature turns against its creator in a strange re-enactment of the Fall. The emancipation of the masses leads to the reign of terror of the gullotine. Nationalism leads inevitably to war. The liberation of man as an absolute ideal leads only to man's self-destruction."

A haberdasher tells me an interesting fact: men with chubby necks keep getting shirts with collars a half-size too tight, in the mistaken notion that this will give them a slimmer look, whereas it does exactly the opposite — a loose collar makes the neck look smaller.

Young people searching for their "real self" must learn that the real self is not something one finds as much as it is something one makes; and it is one's daily actions that shape the inner personality far more permanently than any amount of introspection or intellection.

When I hear an orator use the phrase "all right-thinking men," or "all clear-thinking men," it seems obvious that he is really saying, "All men who think as straight and as clearly as I imagine I do."

What we have yet to understand is that when a country gets a higher type of police officer, it gets a higher type of criminal.

Draft Dodger Ruling In U.S., But Later

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Supreme Court agreed Monday to rule next term on the U.S. government's use of punitive draft reclassifications against defiant and disruptive war protesters.

At issue was a directive that local draft boards consider reclassifying registrants if they participate in illegal activities which interfere with operation of the system.

Saanich Approves Rezoning

Shopping Centre Clears Obstacle

A rezoning application for five acres of land between Cedar Hill Road and Shelbourne just north of McKenzie for shopping centre use was approved Monday night at a public hearing by Saanich council.

Council also approved:

A rezoning application for row housing on the west side of Rutledge opposite Scotia.

The drawing up of a bylaw limiting to one the number of unlicensed vehicles or trailers kept on open property in residential areas, and prohibiting the keeping of detached car parts except under cover.

About 95 property owners, in a petition, protested the rezoning for the shopping centre and there were protestors at the public hearing who voiced their objections.

IN FAVOR

Attorney Lloyd McKenzie, speaking for the developers, said he had a petition with 177 names in favor of it.

The proposed shopping centre is to include a K-Mart department store, a Canada Safeway store and smaller shops on 10 1/2 acres. In 1967 zoning approval was given for 5 1/2 acres on McKenzie. The five acres considered Monday night adjoin them.

BY-LAW CITED

S. J. Harding, 1591 General Place, cited Bylaw 443, and suggested that Ald. Ed Lum "may be excused" from consideration of the application because of "personal interest."

He read a list of names, including Ald. Lum's, which appear on a mortgage on the land on which $185,000 remains unpaid.

Ald. Lum said he had clarified his sitting on the question with solicitors but would withdraw anyway.

SHOPPING CENTRE

Ald. Foster Isherwood moved an amendment to the rezoning motion, to provide for "sufficient screening" of the shopping centre by landscaping.

He said more than 10 feet would be required for it and more than 75 feet might be required for an approach to the centre. This should also be provided for, he moved.

Ald. Alan Newberry opposed the motion, saying the centre was "too large and ahead of its time." Ald. William Noel was absent.

ROW HOUSING

The row housing development on Rutledge will consist of 10 units in two buildings, designed to sell for $16,500 with $1,000 down, $1,000 from the provincial home grant and payments of $17 a month.

The houses are to have basements with two roughed-in bedrooms and a half-bath, main floors with living quarters and sundeck and second floor with two bedrooms and bathroom.

Pemberton Bushes Unclipped

A petition to remove a number of bushes from the Pemberton Park grounds was turned down by Victoria's parks committee Monday.

The petition, signed by 68 residents of the area, says the heavy underbrush has been the "object of many police calls" over the past years—"child molesters hide in these bushes, and they are also a hiding place for children performing illegal acts."

Mayor Hugh Stephen said there would be no bush in the entire city if council was to grant the petitioners' request.

"I don't think that there is any urgency to this problem," he said.

Halibut Men Sail Again

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Fishermen and Allied Workers' union said Sunday Vancouver-based halibut boats were leaving port for the fishing grounds following settlement of a dispute with the B.C. Fishing Vessel Owners' Association.

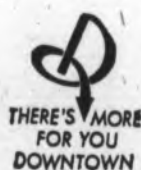

The dispute ended when the owners dropped demands for changes in the longline share agreement. The union said the owners wanted more than one owner with a share in a boat to be able to "sail in the vessel without paying union dues."

Colquitz Team Wins

A team of mathematics students at Colquitz junior high school has led its class for B.C. in a nationwide junior mathematics contest.

The Ontario junior mathematics contest, open to schools across the country, also had its junior high school class led a year ago by a Colquitz team, principal Jack Drummond said Monday.

Team members this year were Maurizio Baldini, Bruce Armistage, Terry McKinnon and Marvin Diercks.

Alberta's Indians May Quit

OTTAWA (CP) — Alberta Indians threatened to walk out of a national Indian conference today unless they are allowed to place six instead of four delegates at the conference table.

Harold Cardinal, 23, of Edmonton, spokesman for the Alberta group, said Indians from the three treaty groups in his province had named six delegates to represent them at the conference dealing with proposed changes in the Indian Act.

But the Indian affairs department had "arbitrarily and without consultation" set a limit of four delegates for each province, Mr. Cardinal declared.

His motion to have all six delegates at the table was to be voted on at a closed session later today. The closed session also was to deal with setting an agenda for the week-long meeting.

Delegates from the other provinces appeared to favor Mr. Cardinal's motion. But questions were raised about Alberta then having more votes than other provinces and about who would pay the travelling expenses of the extra delegates.

The Indian affairs department is sponsoring the national meeting, which is to put the finishing touches on Indian submissions regarding a new Indian Act.

Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, in an opening statement to the conference, said it is up to the Indians to decide what course the meeting should take.

His officials were there only to help. He would attend some sessions only if invited.

March Yields $40,000

HOPE (CP)—With spirits high and about $400 worth of plasters and bandages on their feet, close to 200 marchers in the Moccasin Miles arrived in this upper Fraser Valley centre Sunday after a three-day, 98-mile trek from Vancouver.

March co-ordinator Paul Stanley said the march should raise about $40,000 for six British Columbia Indian groups. Individual marchers were backed by sponsors for various amounts per mile. About 600 marchers left Vancouver Friday.

JOGGED ALL WAY
First to arrive here was professional boxer Roger Adolph of Lillooet and Vancouver, who covered each of the three daily laps at a fast jog. His elapsed time was just under 23 hours.

Oldest starter to complete the trek was Dolv Kane, 78.

"Some kids came in with their feet covered with bandages," said Mr. Stanley. He said St. John's Ambulance workers dispensed $400 worth of plasters, gauze and bandages for blisters.

March chairman H. A. Smith, with $1,300 pledged on him, made it all the way, as did Vancouver alderman Harry Rankin.

Natives Query Mergers

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — An Indian organization Saturday urged the Commons standing committee on fisheries and forestry to summon salmon cannery executives to explain recent mergers and plant closures.

The Native Brotherhood of British Columbia said in a brief to the committee that mergers and closures have caused extensive unemployment among Indians in this northern B.C. coastal area.

The brotherhood said the federal government neglected to consult fishermen before it introduced its new program of limiting licensing of salmon boats.

WHY CONTROL?
The Indian group urged a 12-month suspension of the new regulations so that all sides of the question can be examined.

Committee member Douglas Hogarth (L—New Westminster) asked why the cannery companies have such tight financial control of fishermen.

Hubert Doonan, a Prince Rupert member of the brotherhood, said Indians want to steer clear of company domination, provided there is an alternative to financing purchase of their boats.

The Resignations In France, North Ireland:

By O'Neill

'Wicked Men' Blamed

BELFAST (AP) — Prime Minister Terence O'Neill resigned Monday under mounting pressure from his divided Unionist party and threw strife-torn Northern Ireland into another political crisis.

O'Neill blamed the failure of his six-year fight for reform and moderation on "wicked men" on both extremes of the ancient feud between Protestants and the Roman Catholics minority in Northern Ireland.

POWER STRUGGLE

O'Neill's departure in the wake of renewed civil rights violence last week climaxed a long power struggle in the Protestant-based Unionist party. The party, allied with Britain's Conservatives, has governed Northern Ireland for nearly 50 years.

In his resignation statement, O'Neill, 54, a former captain of the elite Irish Guards, said he was quitting to serve "the cause of reform," hoping that the next prime minister would not be hampered "by personal animosities." He pledged to support any new leader fully committed to Roman Catholic-Protestant equality.

Apparent favorite to succeed O'Neill is Brian Faulkner, for-

By DOMINIQUE CLIFT
and PETER REGENSTRIEF

Third of a series

English-speaking people in Quebec are uneasy.

They watch the surging tide of French-Canadian nationalism and worry about the future of their language.

They fear the day may come when French may be proclaimed the only official language in Quebec and the use of English shunned in the schools, the stores, the offices and factories of their province.

But what do French-speaking Quebecers think of the idea of turning the province into a unilingual state where French would again be the paramount language it was before the British conquest of 1763?

At this point, the majority aren't impressed.

Fewer than one-third of French-speaking people in Quebec—30 per cent—favor a "French-only" policy. Even fewer—27 per cent—believe it would be fair. And fewer still—23 per cent—feel it would be practical.

But the sense of identity with French-speaking people outside Quebec remains strong. Sixty per cent believe Quebec has a special responsibility to protect the culture of French-Canadians living in other provinces. And more than 75 per cent would like Quebec to have a special—but not too close—relationship with France.

These are some of the attitudes revealed in a telephone poll of 428 French-

Tremor in California Too Little, Too Late?

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — California, where doomsayers have been predicting a fall-into-the-sea earthquake this month, was rocked by a fairly severe tremor for about a minute Monday afternoon. Large areas swayed in Los Angeles but damage was minor and no one was hurt. The quake centre was in the southern California desert.

Quebec Sees No Change

From CP, UPI

OTTAWA—Hope that relations between France and Canada will improve now that President Charles de Gaulle has resigned was expressed Monday by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp.

However, in Quebec, a spokesman for the province said the agreements that have led to booming Franco-Quebec co-operation "are between France and Quebec, not between de Gaulle and a Quebec premier."

"There are firm engagements, as far as the content and operation of the agreements are concerned, for years to come," he added.

Prime Minister Trudeau's comment was much more indirect. When David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich) asked if he had sent a telegram of sympathy to de Gaulle, Trudeau replied: "I know those in political life know the life of a politician is a bit ephemeral and I think the general's surprise was no greater than my own."

'Unnecessary Way'

Conservative House leader, Gerald Baldwin then caused loud laughter by asking if Ottawa has received a message of condolence from France concerning the resignation of Transport Minister Paul Hellyer.

Sharp said outside the Commons that "it seemed to us (the government) that from time to time, Gen. de Gaulle took measures that didn't promote good relations between Canada and France."

"In fact, these moves interfered with those good relations in quite an unnecessary way."

Sharp hoped there would be "an orderly change" as France votes for a new president. He said Canada is anxious to co-operate with France, especially as it relates to Canada's French-speaking citizens.

"We have had difficulties (with France) in the past and I hope these can be reduced in the future," he said.

The Quebec spokesman said Franco-Quebec relations are likely to continue to blossom even if Franco-Canadian relations improve.

"Even if there are good relations with all of Canada," he said, "Don't forget that 90 per cent of France's relations here will be with Quebec."

The Quebec spokesman and sources in Ottawa agreed the outlook is for a probable return to the relatively happy state of Franco-Canadian relations before de Gaulle's "vive le Quebec libre" speech in Montreal in July, 1967.

In Paris, an official of interim president Alain Poher's political party, the Democratic Centre, said it favors continued bonds between France and French Canada but without any "irritation" of Ottawa-Quebec relations.

The party, which sharply criticized former president de Gaulle for his "Quebec libre" speech in Montreal two years ago, wants to cut any excessive expenditure by de Gaulle on "prestige" projects.

But the official added in an interview that the Democratic Centre also favors good relations with "those who are our cousins"—meaning French-speaking Canadians.

Poher could be a top candidate for a regular term as president when Frenchmen elect a new chief of state a few weeks from now.

Meanwhile, slight relaxation in the Gaullist grip on French foreign policy could be signified by the resignation Monday of Gaullist MP Jacques Vendroux.

Poher Leads Until Vote

PARIS (AP)—Alain Poher received the powers of the presidency of Charles de Gaulle's Fifth Republic without ceremony Monday, but his only major task is to set up a presidential election.

De Gaulle remained behind the green iron gates of his country estate at Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises in eastern France, where the tolling of the church clock at noon marked the end of his 10 years of power.

Noon was the hour de Gaulle himself had selected for leaving France "to its destiny."

His resignation, the result of a sharp defeat in a referendum calling for decentralization of power and Senate reform, stirred up all kinds of guessing in Europe and around the world.

GOLD FLURRY

Gold and currency markets encountered a new flurry of trading. The French franc hit new lows and gold new highs in Paris, underscoring the uncertainty some felt about the French economy without de Gaulle.

The British looked with renewed hope for joining the European Common Market. The West Germans and others foresaw the possibility of a more flexible France and European political unity.

ISRAELIS HOPEFUL

De Gaulle kept Britain out of the Common Market and sought for France the leading role among European countries. Israelis expressed a hope for a change in what they regarded as de Gaulle's pro-Arab policies, and the Arabs considered they had lost a friend.

At the Elysee Palace here, se-

20 Words And Why

Charles de Gaulle used only 20 words to resign as president of France:

"I am ceasing the exercise of my functions as president of the Republic. This decision takes effect at noon today."

He did so because of this vote on his complex referendum to change the constitution:

Yes—10,892,169, or 47.6 per cent; No—11,889,559, or 52.4 per cent.

Benson Tables Wide Reforms

Life-Firms Tax Unveiled

OTTAWA (CP) — Revised proposals for taxing life insurance companies, and the policyholders who make profits on their investments in them, were tabled in the Commons Monday by Finance Minister Edgar Benson.

In a nutshell, the taxes will be:

● Normal corporation profit taxes of 52 per cent on the normal net income of life insurance companies after allowing for deductible business expenses.

● A special flat-rate tax of 15 per cent on the profits of insurance company investments which flow through the companies to the policyholders, to be paid by the companies. These flow-through investment profits will not be counted as normal insurance company profits.

● Normal personal income taxes, which vary according to a person's taxable income, on any proceeds a policyholder gets in excess of cost when he cashes in a policy before death. But the companies will be relieved of this amount of tax in order to avoid duplication.

● Where a policy includes an amount to be segregated and invested apart from insurance in a pooled fund, as in an unincorporated mutual fund, the earnings to the policyholder—interest and dividends, but not capital gains—will have to be declared as personal income by the policyholder and taxed.

An important feature of Benson's revised proposal is that the taxes on policyholders will not apply until 1970, to provide time for working out the administrative machinery. The insurance companies, however, will have to pay the full amount of investment tax until then.

Benson first proposed taxing the life insurance companies in his Oct. 22 budget last year.

Essentially, the life insurance companies were to be taxed, according to the budget last fall, in the same way as other business activity—that is, on their profits after allowable deductions from gross income.

In the case of insurance companies, however, special rules had to be evolved defining life insurance profits. The new resolution also proposes taxing the Canadian income of non-Canadian general insurance companies in the same way that other non-Canadian corporations pay taxes on their branch operations in Canada.

Extension Ruled Out For Income Returns

OTTAWA (CP) — Revenue Minister Jean-Pierre Cote rejected a suggestion in the Commons Monday that the deadline for filing personal income tax statements be extended to Monday, May 5, from midnight Thursday night. A Conservative MP urged such action because of the Air Canada strike and troubles in the mail delivery system.

But New Minister Launched Soon

Hellyer Sinks with Barely a Ripple

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has treated the resignation of his transport minister so coolly that the political waters seem to have closed over Paul Hellyer's head with scarcely a ripple.

Informants said Monday that the prime minister had not yet concentrated on appointment of a successor to his chief cabinet lieutenant, whose resignation takes effect Wednesday.

Seasoned political observers

said Trudeau will make as few cabinet changes as possible at this time—the minimum would be one—so as not to give the slightest impression that Hellyer's resignation had caused any panic in the administration.

The observers said they could not recall when the resignation of such a senior minister had created so little fuss—for the time being at least.

However, Hellyer has said he disputes what he calls

Trudeau's soft-on-the-provinces version of federalism and has indicated that he will speak out publicly on the issue.

Consequently, it is extremely likely that both Trudeau and Hellyer will have further and tougher exchanges than the minister's letter of resignation last Thursday and Trudeau's quick acceptance of it.

Despite his public shrug about Hellyer's defection, the prime minister reacted sharply on the issue of housing, one avowed cause of the split.

Informants said the cabinet earlier had rejected a proposal that National Housing Act mortgages on existing homes be raised to $18,000 from $10,000.

But Trudeau announced such a move Friday.

The prime minister's simplest cabinet move now would be to appoint a minister without portfolio or back-bencher to the transport job. That would be the only move he would have to make.

If he appoints a minister with portfolio to the job—the name of Supply Minister Don Jamieson has been mentioned—he would have to make a second cabinet move.

Whatever he does, Trudeau is expected to give the matter attention today and to act fairly quickly.

The reason is that he has announced that proposed NHA amendments will be introduced soon and he will need a minister to pilot this legislation through the Commons.

Forest Firm Flying After Wintry Slump

By HARRY YOUNG
 Business Editor

The greatest month on record was established in March by MacMillan Bloedel, as the giant forest industry firm pulled out all stops to make up for weather-ruined months of January and February.

Chairman J. V. Clyne, in the first-quarter report to shareholders, said that during January and February when B.C. experienced its worst weather in many decades, some phases of company's operations were affected.

The net profit for those two months was the lowest experienced since the merger with Powell River in late 1959.

When normal weather returned in March shipments of all major products, particularly newsprint, were accelerated to such an extent that total shipments for the March 31 quarter exceeded those of the corresponding quarter of 1968. Net earnings for the period were $10,238,469 (46 cents a share) compared with $7,400,000 (35 cents) a year ago. Sales rose to $154,762,329 from $130,332,774.

HIGHER PRICES
 Clyne said the effect of additional facilities provided by the company's expansion program, together with improved prices, resulted in March recording the highest single-month operating profit in the history of the company.

Prospects for the remainder of the year appeared encouraging, he said.

JOLLY FAMILY NOW

A new family of Jolly Jumper companies with worldwide patents, trademarks and distributing rights for the famous Vancouver-developed baby exerciser has been formed.

Jolly Jumper Products of America of Toronto has taken over four companies to bring this about. They are International Pediatric Products and Jolly Jumper Sales of British Columbia, and Jolly Jumper (Nassau) of the Bahamas and Bonnie Bouncer of Great Britain.

Patrick Ryan, president of the merged company, says Jolly Jumper's initial marketing program in the U.S. is meeting with "tremendous success" and is being extended. Plans are being prepared for two manufacturing plants in the U.S.

PLANT ON SCHEDULE

Peace River Mining and Smelting says its iron-powder plant at Amherstburg, Ont., is well on schedule and a startup is expected by Jan. 1, 1970.

Company personnel is being transferred to the site for pre-production training.

G. R. Heffernan, president, says that although the iron powder capacity scheduled to come into production in the next year may create an oversupply position in the early 1970s. Peace River expects its high-quality chemical produced powders will find a ready market.

Peace River's net profit for the six months ended Feb. 28 was $109,102, compared with $22,625 a year earlier. Income came from its Matthew Brady Holdings subsidiary.

CAN'T HAVE BOTH

Mining and other exploration companies needing new capital run into difficulties if their shares are listed on both the Toronto and Vancouver stock exchanges.

Because of conflicting rules and regulations, Silver Standard Mines has come to the conclusion there is at present no manner in which a company having such dual listings can obtain an underwriting of its treasury shares.

As Silver Standard is involved in a number of important mining projects in central B.C. for which it may require funds in the near future, its president R. W. Wilson has informed shareholders that a request for delisting from the Toronto Stock Exchange has been made.

WITH REGRET

Wilson says the decision to delist was voluntary and was taken with regret. The company says it has no quarrel with the TSE and hopes that at some future date, and under changing circumstances, it will be able to apply for relisting.

The listing with the Vancouver Stock Exchange will be maintained.

NEW FOREST ISSUE

A British Columbia Interior lumber company centred on Kamloops has turned public and is making an initial public offering of its common shares.

It is Balco Forest Products, which has about 8,000,000 board feet cutting rights a year and exports about 90 per cent of its products. A wood chip contract with Kamloops Pulp and Paper is also in existence.

The issue comprises 128,000 shares of which 80,000 are out of the treasury. The remaining 48,000 shares are being offered by the principal shareholders. The shares are being priced for distribution at $11.

In the quarter ended March 31, Balco reports its net profit at $251,000 (53 cents a share).

S-S KAMLOOPS-BOUND

Canadian Pacific Railway through its Marathon Realty Co. subsidiary is developing a 38-acre enclosed-mail shopping centre on its former freight yards in downtown Kamloops.

Major tenant of the project is Simpsons-Sears which is to build a 90,000-square-foot department centre. Construction will start immediately and the store will be ready by early 1970.

Chemical Tests Renewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The defence department confirmed Saturday that it is again testing chemical agents at the United States Army's Dugway Proving Ground in Utah, but under new precautions.

There was a public uproar after more than 6,000 sheep on ranges near the Dugway testing area died mysteriously in March, 1968.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars in claims filed by owners of the stricken animals have been approved.

Seaway Money Woes Still Same Old Story

OTTAWA (CP) — Official Ottawa didn't bat an eyelash when U.S. Congressman Roman C. Pucinski said last week the St. Lawrence seaway is "dangerously close" to bankruptcy.

Canadian authorities don't need to be told the seaway is having money troubles. Its financial plight has been an issue for several years.

Pierre Camu, president of Canada's St. Lawrence Seaway authority, said in an interview Monday his annual report to Parliament is due in about two weeks and "it will tell the same old story."

The seaway is making an operating profit, he said, but cannot even make a beginning on the retirement of its debt.

Since the seaway is international, its tolls can be changed only by agreement between Canada and the United States. The last time the tolls were reviewed, in 1966, it was Washington, yielding to the heavy pressure of the Great Lakes states, that blocked an increase.

The question comes up again next year and Camu said it looks as though Canada again will favor a toll increase.

Pucinski, an Illinois Democrat, has introduced a private bill in the U.S. House of Representatives that he says would convert the debt of the U.S. St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corp. into a government investment.

Diner's Club Arrives

Kremlin on the Cuff

LONDON (AP) — Communism was supposed to lead to the cashless society, but credit cards have gotten there first. Diners' Club International announced Monday that its cards will be honored in Moscow after June 1.

The club said its members will be able to use their cards at Moscow's Metropole and National hotels. Both are run by Inourist, the Soviet state travel organization, and the card carriers will be able to pay their bills at home in their own currency.

Jonathan Boreham, president of the British branch of the Diners' Club, said the agreement with the Soviet Union took two years of negotiations to work out.

Second Trustee Quits over Cash Vote

DUNCAN — Cowichan School Board has received the second resignation from one of its members since the 1969 budget bylaw was defeated March 29.

Shortly after the defeat, Trustee Alastair Macdonald resigned and Monday night trustee Jack Efford followed.

Mr. Efford has been a school trustee for 9½ years, 6½ of which were served on the Cowichan board.

He was previously on Nanaimo school board. He said: "It is not this way, I don't hope it is not this way, I don't think people who voted knew what they did."

He noted that the school board had done an excellent job in the past. "It pulled the area out of the position it was in and put it in the forefront in the province. I have been part of it and I am proud."

He stated cutting the budget because of the defeat was a backward step.

"I deplore the fact that the school trustees job has become a political football. It was not like that but it appears to be here now."

Meanwhile the board is to discuss with provincial officials cutting of a sum which is above $300,000 and more than an increase in the rate set by the education department.

The board gave the first three readings to a tax rate bylaw, a bylaw to adopt the annual budget and levy the rate for school taxes for 1969.

The original budget amounted to $4,366,572, as against $4,066,348 now. In order to raise the total amount of $2,515,308, by taxation in the school district, a rate of 29.99 mills will be levied.

Last year's education mill rate was 35.49 mills. The reason for the decrease is this year's government grant.

If the budget bylaw had been approved the mill rate would have been 34.35 mills, a decrease of 1.14 mills from the 1968 rate.

Board chairman Bruce Devitt said that at various public forums before the budget vote, the public has been advised that certain cuts would have to be made if the bylaw was defeated.

He stated that 10 janitors had received their layoff notices to become effective later next month.

The final apportionment for district taxation is: Duncan, $275,349; North Cowichan, $1,506,184; and the rural area, $733,575.

Another subject to be discussed tonight with officials from the education department will be the 1969 Malaspina Regional College budget summary which shows a grand total of $594,000, with a deficit totaling $29,083.

Cowichan trustees objected to a footnote which stated: "The deficiency is caused by the failure of School District 65 (Cowichan) to include an additional amount of $29,083."

Budget Spending at New High

Property, Water Rates Increase in Nanaimo

NANAIMO — Increases in the municipal real estate tax rate, the water rate and the assessment base for improvements were passed by Nanaimo Council Monday night to help pay for record expenditures of $5,280,223 in the next fiscal year.

The increases were contained in the new budget presented by finance committee chairman Ald. Gertrude Hall.

Ald. Hall said the municipal real estate rate was being increased by 4.9 mills to 82.35 mills, or 6.38 per cent.

SCHOOL RATE

She said this did not include a school rate increase of .79 mill or a regional hospital reduction of .81 mill.

Ald. Hall said water rates would be increased 20 per cent effective July 1.

She said the assessment base for improvements would be raised to 75 per cent from 30 per cent.

She said this was the same base now used for school taxes.

Ald. Hall said wage increases spread throughout various city departments were one reason taxes had to be increased. She said another reason was a loss to the city of $20,000 annually in police court fines as a result of the driving demerit system.

As an example, she said welfare spending increases, added to the fact the city now had to pay 20 per cent of costs instead of 10 per cent as in 1968 meant a $46,400 increase in welfare costs.

An increase in the debt charges over last year was responsible for 3.03 mills of the rate increase, she said.

Mayor Frank Ney said that despite the increases, more than 50 per cent of Nanaimo ratepayers would be paying less than $100 a year after the homeowner grant.

He noted that although the city had power to borrow up to $7,000,000 only $3,000,000 had been borrowed.

WATER RATES

Before the budget was presented, Greater Nanaimo water district chief commissioner A. W. MacDonald told council the rates charged by the district to the city would have to increase.

Mr. MacDonald explained that the water district's administration board, at a recent meeting, felt a two-cent per thousand-gallon levy to the city, based on the wholesale price of water, was necessary to build a reserve fund for capital projects. It was necessitated because of unfavorable debenture market conditions.

Based on 1968 consumption, Mr. MacDonald said, the levy increase would have raised $23,678.92, charged against the 1,183,946,000 gallons used by all participating districts.

Trial Run Ahead For Car Parking

DUNCAN — Duncan downtown merchants will have a trial run for their new one-way and angle parking proposal 7 p.m. Thursday on Station Street.

The experimental area will be set up between Craig and Canada Avenue and merchants will be asked to bring their cars to see how the scheme would work. The experiment will be observed by the city's streets committee and the consulting engineer.

The scheme would be part of a larger one which would eventually involve the entire length of Station Street with one-way traffic running west; Craig from Government to Ingram, with one-way traffic north and Kenneth, from Jubilee to Canada Avenue with one-way traffic east.

Downtown merchants recently approached city council and aldermen stated they wanted to study the proposal carefully.

Parkland Offer Rejected

An offer to purchase parkland in the Gulf Islands was turned down Monday by the Capital Regional District Board.

The offer — made to the board by the provincial parks department — mentioned "certain parklands on Salt Spring Island," but the board felt that no such action was warranted at this moment.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said he would like to see the Gulf Islands assume responsibility for parks for the present.

"We could become involved sometime in the future," he said.

The board was also told that no comments had been made by any of the residents of the Gulf Islands which would lead the board to believe that its involvement might be welcome.

McKnight

Port Alberni Road Safety

McKnight Wins Support

PORT ALBERNI — Port Alberni aldermen decided Monday to support a road safety program proposed by Ald. George McKnight.

They accepted a brief from Ald. McKnight and passed a motion, to be forwarded to the annual meeting of British Columbia mayors and municipalities calling on the federal government and the Canadian Radio Television Commission to enact, and enforce, regulations preventing and prohibiting "irresponsible methods" of car advertising.

Ald. McKnight's brief suggested that 12 leading community organizations set up individual highway safety committees, and each undertake promotion of highway safety for one month of the year.

A second suggestion was that each organization name one member to a co-ordinating policy committee to which would be added a city council member, the RCMP and a member or members from the highways department or the provincial government.

"Within the broad policy adopted by the co-ordinating committee, each organization would be free and encouraged to conduct its monthly safety program in its own way," Ald. McKnight suggested.

Certificates would be awarded for the best job of safety programming, and active participation by press, radio, industry labour and the general public would be encouraged and sought in an attempt to reverse the present upward trend in death and destruction from highway accidents, Ald. McKnight proposed.

Ideas around which campaigns could be built included:

● Scoreboards to graphically display the accident toll;

● Highway warnings where deaths have occurred;

● Public exposure of irresponsible advertising which might contribute to excessive speed and recklessness;

● Campaigns for highway improvements;

● More effective driver training and more effective testing facilities;

● Wider use of seat belts, and better educational material dealing with driver control.

Council also approved a contribution of $5,000 to the Trail Relief Fund and agreed to establish a temporary headquarters at city hall to receive contributions.

NDP Seated

MP's Oath Sixth For Barnett

OTTAWA (CP)—Tom Barnett, 59, was sworn in Monday for the sixth time as MP for Comox-Alberni riding.

Mr. Barnett's victory in an April 8 byelection raised the NDP's strength in the Commons to 23.

TAKES SEAT

Mr. Barnett, previously elected in 1953, 1957, 1962, 1963 and 1965, took his Commons seat at Monday's sitting.

Defeated Comox-Alberni Liberal candidate Richard Durante has said there is a possibility the Liberals may contest Mr. Barnett's victory on the grounds of alleged irregularities in the number of voters on the voting list. Liberal association lawyers are judging the matter.

Prior to leaving Port Alberni over the weekend, Mr. Barnett said, "we have experienced a period of unusually vigorous electioneering. Now that it is over, I want to give my assurance that my services as Member of Parliament are available to everyone, political friend or foe alike as they have been in previous parliaments."

MAIL SERVICE

Among important matters which Mr. Barnett said he intended to pursue in Ottawa was the provision of letter carrier mail service to Courtenay.

"The walls of the Courtenay post office are literally bulging with lock boxes, now available to householders only at exorbitant rates," Mr. Barnett asserted. "Maintenance of an efficient mail service under these circumstances is an impossibility and I intend to demand immediate action to correct the situation."

Mr. Barnett also said he considered the administration of unemployment insurance a top priority matter. "I intend to demand the reopening of unemployment insurance offices in Port Alberni and Courtenay and the establishment of an office in Campbell River" Mr. Barnett said.

"The experiences of the past winter have amply demonstrated how inefficient and inhuman the present arrangement of processing claims is. Some 6,000 signatures to a protest in Campbell River support this contention," Mr. Barnett said.

Pressure for early action on the promised deep sea docking facilities in Port Alberni, and clarification of the rights of individual property owners in the area where the national marine park is to be established, also rate high on Mr. Barnett's list of business in Ottawa, he said.

Montreal Hears Quaife

DUNCAN — Mayor Jim Quaife of Duncan went on the air Monday via telephone, when he took part in a program broadcast by Montreal radio station CKGM.

The station became interested in Mayor Quaife's Duncan open line program after reading a news story about it and invited him to discuss it on the station's "Top Line of the World."

The interview by Montreal broadcaster David Bassett lasted for about 12 minutes.

QUAIFE HONORED

Mayor Quaife was followed by a French minister. "I felt quite honored," he said.

The Duncan program, broadcast every Monday afternoon by CKAY started in 1968, a few months after Mayor Quaife took office. From a monthly program after every council meeting, it developed into a weekly feature.

B.C. Nature Council

Strong Curbs Urged To Plug Oil Spilling

COMOX — The B.C. Nature Council will ask the provincial and federal governments to adopt "the stringent possible measures" to prevent and control oil spills from offshore drilling and tankers.

The request was passed as a resolution at the council's annual meeting Saturday.

Newly-elected second vice-president Elton Anderson of Victoria said in a statement to the press that "spills from offshore drilling are much more numerous than is generally realized."

"Many have occurred in Cook Inlet in Alaska, and the operations of Shell Oil there were threatened with a shutdown by the state because the situation was so bad. Hundreds (of spills) have also occurred off the California coast. Indeed, one sizeable company at Long Beach lives solely by cleaning up such spills."

Mr. Anderson said the value of commercial development is "not to be denied, but the present policy of permitting natural resources to be exploited for a single purpose with little or no reference to the needs of the community as a whole ... is damaging our environment in many ways.

In other business, the council voted to incorporate under the Societies Act as the Federation of B.C. Naturalists. A full range of individual, and corporate memberships would be made available, the council said, under the new organization.

Conservationist Hugh Monahan of Vancouver was elected president of the council for a two-year term. Dr. T. M. C. Taylor of Victoria is first vice-president and Peg Briault of Vancouver continues as secretary.

The men he suggested should be on the council are director, Roderick Haig-Brown, Campbell River conservationist and author, public aquarium director, proposed the five-member council to consider safeguards against pollution by new industries.

Howard Paish, executive director of the B.C. Wildlife Federation, Dr. Ian McTaggart Cowan, University of B.C. ecologist and dean of graduate studies, and Dr. Peter Larkin, director of the Institute of Fisheries.

Mr. Rest said that, like Dr. Newman, he is "tremendously concerned" with offshore explorations for which Shell Canada had drilled 14 test wells.

"It is a desperately dangerous situation for wildlife and, also, it is dangerous from a recreational point of view to have drilling so close to Long Beach," he said.

School Trustees Meet

District Merger Scheme Going for Investigation

NANAIMO — Island school boards will investigate the pros and cons of amalgamation before committing themselves to any action.

This was the decision of a meeting Sunday of the Island branch of the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

The department of education has begun encouraging amalgamations among B.C.'s 85 school districts, though no marriages have yet taken place.

Sunday's discussion of the subject ended quickly on the motion of Saanich board chairman Mrs. Rubymay Parrott that trustees seek full information from the department and from the BCSTA head office in Vancouver.

The Saanich board is already scheduled to discuss amalgamation with a department official May 6.

Both Saanich and Sooke school boards have rejected the idea of amalgamation with Greater Victoria for the time being at least.

Cowichan and Lake Cowichan districts are reportedly considering union.

Last October the BCSTA annual convention adopted the policy that any amalgamation should produce educational improvement and money savings, and should take into account geographic factors and preserve local autonomy.

The Sunday branch meeting followed a seminar on school district management that began Friday evening.

During a brief meeting on Sunday, members appointed Alex Smith of Yellow Point as a life member Mr. Smith, who first became a school board member in the Ladysmith area, in 1955 was the fifth person to be appointed to life membership.

Strike Spreads To Nanaimo

NANAIMO — A Plumbers' Union strike has spread to the $3,500,000 expansion project at the fisheries department research station at Nanaimo.

The union rejected a new contract proposal Sunday and is expected to hit other Island projects.

Already 300 members are striking against 45 firms in the Lower Mainland.

Business agent John Fisher of Local 170 said he has Mechanical Industrial Relations Association that the advised negotiators for the union was ready to reopen talks immediately.

UVic President Calm

U.S. Influx: Don't Panic

By BILL STAVDAI

He may be slightly biased on the subject, but University of Victoria president-elect Dr. Bruce Partridge isn't alarmed over the influx of Americans into Canadian universities.

It's not simply that he himself is an American who personifies Canada's controversial brain gain. Dr. Partridge, a boyish 42, admits readily that excessive American influence in some university departments here would be a bad thing.

"I would be very concerned if the University of Victoria had a large number of Americans in the history department," Mr. Partridge said Saturday.

The "Yanks" are indeed coming but let's not panic, says Mr. Partridge in terms more diplomatic than that.

"Some subjects, like history, are very nationalistic. Others, like mathematics, are international."

"Generally, when hiring we should get the best person available."

"In certain areas like history, sociology and economics, I don't think we should look outside of Canada."

And in a subject like mathematics, he's indifferent to the professor's nationality.

Vice-president of prestigious Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md., Mr. Partridge will take office here July 1 amid a growing controversy over Americanization of our campuses.

Some Canadians view the issue as the latest threat in a series that began with the American Revolution. At the other end of the scale, the matter stirs only yawns.

Leaders of the anti-American movement are two professors at Carleton University in Ottawa, James Steele and Robin Matthews. Despite overwhelming rejection of their stand by their fellow faculty members, they have warned Canadian campuses are being taken over by Americans.

They can cite some alarming statistics.

On Friday, Steele announced that about 86 per cent of all 1968 teaching appointments at Canadian universities were given to non-Canadians.

He quoted the federal man-

power and -immigration department as his source, but didn't give an analysis by nationality. More than 2,200 university teachers came into Canada from abroad last year, said Steele.

The Ottawa Citizen recently reported there were 15 Americans in York University's sociology department, and only one Canadian. Many departments at York are 30 to 51 per cent American-staffed, said the Citizen.

Closer to home, Carleton's Matthews said in a recent interview:

"It upsets me very much that Simon Fraser and the University of Victoria have American presidents. That's saying that in our country of 20,000,000 people we don't have a single man who is good enough to be president of a university."

The standard counter-argument is that nationality is irrelevant in the academic world. Besides, it's pointed out, the American tide is the inevitable result of Canada's long failure to educate enough of its own people to hold professional rank.

University of Victoria chancellor Richard Wilson told a McGill University alumni dinner here last week:

"There is no doubt in my mind we appointed the very best man available, and it was on this assessment that the appointment was made."

What should a university president do in hiring?

"It's a matter of selection," says Mr. Partridge. "Education (teacher training) is a sticky one, though. There should be a Canadian flavor of style and input, but other countries have much to offer."

And will Bruce Partridge become a Canadian citizen?

"I would guess that I may, but I can't for five years."

"If I had to put a bet on it, I would say yes."

And then, with a grin:

"On the other hand, they may not want me after three years."

Officially, at least, no one knows how many Americans are on the UVic faculty. The last assessment was in 1965, when 44 per cent were Canadian-born and 18.5 per cent were Americans.

Today, the percentage of Americans is certainly higher, but Mr. Partridge maintains that it remains lower than the Canadian university average.

Mr. Partridge's weekend visit here is the last of several familiarization trips before he takes office. So far he has preferred to listen rather than speak, but he is already sure about one thing.

"Part of the strength of Western higher education has been its diversity."

Posies Link Brighton, Courtenay

COURTENAY—There is to be a floral link between Brighton, England and Courtenay.

But there is a closer tie with the English seaside resort. The mayor-elect Frank Masefield Baker is the brother of Mrs. Kath Kirk who is well-known for her Miles of Flowers along side walks at the southern end of Courtenay. Brighton presents an annual floral salute to overseas cities. A plan was recently sent by Mr. Baker to Mrs. Kirk and she presented it to Courtenay council. The flower bed will have a scalloped border of bright blue lobelia, edging a field of white pyrethrum par aureum.

At either end of the 20-foot expanse of flowers will be circular beds of red comet begonia and petite orange marigold. A central shield will have a rim of Red Comet begonias and there will be a maple leaf Scarlette begonias against a field of Viva begonias.

There will be also the title Courtenay, Vancouver Island, British Columbia. In November, Mr. Baker will be host at an official ball when Mrs. Kirk hopes to be present and take an expression of thanks from Courtenay to Brighton.

Shoplifting Cigarettes Brings Term in Jail

COURTENAY—A Victoria man was sentenced to three months in jail for shoplifting when he appeared before magistrate John Ryland Friday.

John Murphy first appeared April 21 and at that time admitted taking a carton of cigarettes from a supermarket. RCMP said at the time he was arrested he had $31 in his possession.

The crown read a record to the accused and he admitted convictions for breaking and entry with intent to steal, possession of stolen property, impaired driving, assault to resist arrest, and robbery with violence.

When he appeared for sentence he said he now had a good job and asked for a suspended sentence.

The magistrate said in view of the accused's record and the fact that he had only just been released from the penitentiary a suspended sentence was not appropriate.

The Resignations In France, North Ireland:

By O'Neill

'Wicked Men' Blamed

BELFAST (AP) — Prime Minister Terence O'Neill resigned Monday under mounting pressure from his divided Unionist party and threw strife-torn Northern Ireland into another political crisis.

O'Neill blamed the failure of his six-year fight for reform and moderation on "wicked men" on both extremes of the ancient feud between Protestants and the Roman Catholic minority in Northern Ireland.

POWER STRUGGLE

O'Neill's departure in the wake of renewed civil rights violence last week climaxed a long power struggle in the Protestant-based Unionist party. The party, allied with Britain's Conservatives, has governed Northern Ireland for nearly 50 years.

In his resignation statement, O'Neill, 52, former captain of the elite Irish Guards, said he was quitting to serve "the cause of reform," hoping that the next prime minister would not be hampered "by personal animosities." He pledged to support any new leader fully committed to Roman Catholic-Protestant equality.

Apparent favorite to succeed O'Neill is Brian Faulkner, former

HOPES HIGHER FOR CANADA

Quebec Sees No Change

From CP, UPI

OTTAWA—Hope that relations between France and Canada will improve now that President Charles de Gaulle has resigned was expressed Monday by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp.

However, in Quebec, a spokesman for the province said the agreements that have led to booming Franco-Quebec co-operation "are between France and Quebec, not between de Gaulle and a Quebec premier."

"There are firm engagements, as far as the content and operation of the agreements are concerned, for years to come," he added.

Prime Minister Trudeau's comment was much more indirect. When David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich) asked if he had sent a telegram of sympathy to de Gaulle, Trudeau replied: "I know those in political life know the life of a politician is a bit ephemeral and I think the general's surprise was no greater than my own."

'Unnecessary Way'

Conservative House leader Gerald Baldwin then caused loud laughter by asking if Ottawa has received a message of condolence from France concerning the resignation of Transport Minister Paul Hellyer.

Sharp said outside the Commons that "it seemed to us the government" that from time to time, Gen. de Gaulle took measures that didn't promote good relations between Canada and France.

"In fact, these moves interfered with those good relations in quite an unnecessary way."

Sharp hoped there would be "an orderly change" as France votes for a new president. He said Canada is anxious to co-operate with France, especially as it relates to Canada's French-speaking citizens.

"We have had difficulties (with France) in the past and I hope these can be reduced in the future," he said.

The Quebec spokesman said Franco-Quebec relations are likely to continue to blossom even if Franco-Canadian relations improve.

"Even if there are good relations with all of Canada," he said, "Don't forget that 90 per cent of France's relations here will be with Quebec."

The Quebec spokesman and sources in Ottawa agreed the outlook is for a probable return to the relatively happy state of Franco-Canadian relations before de Gaulle's "vive le Quebec libre" speech in Montreal in July, 1967.

In Paris, an official of Interim President Alain Poher's political party, the Democratic Centre, said it favors continued bonds between France and French Canada but without any "irritation" of Ottawa-Quebec relations.

The party, which sharply criticized former president de Gaulle for his "Quebec libre" speech in Montreal two years ago, wants to cut any excessive expenditure by de Gaulle on "prestige" projects.

But the official added in an interview that the Democratic Centre also favors good relations with "those who are our cousins"—meaning French-speaking Canadians.

Poher could be a top candidate for a regular term as president when Frenchmen elect a new chief of state a few weeks from now.

Meanwhile, slight relaxation in the Gaullist grip on French foreign policy could be signified by the resignation Monday of Gaullist MP Jacques Vendroux,

Poher Leads Until Vote

PARIS (AP)—Alain Poher received the powers of the presidency of Charles de Gaulle's Fifth Republic without ceremony Monday, but his only major task is to set up a presidential election.

De Gaulle remained behind the green iron gates of his country estate at Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises in eastern France, where the tolling of the church clock at noon marked the end of his 10 years of power.

Noon was the hour de Gaulle himself had selected for leaving France "to its destiny."

His resignation, the result of a sharp defeat in a referendum calling for decentralization of power and Senate reform, stirred up all kinds of guessing in Europe and around the world.

GOLD FLURRY

Gold and currency markets encountered a new flurry of trading. The French franc hit new lows and gold new highs in Paris, underscoring the uncertainty some felt about the French economy without de Gaulle.

The British looked with renewed hope for joining the European Common Market. The West Germans and others foresaw the possibility of a more flexible France and European political unity.

ISRAELIS HOPEFUL

De Gaulle kept Britain out of the Common Market and sought for France the leading role among European countries. Israelis expressed a hope for a change in what they regarded as de Gaulle's pro-Arab policies, and the Arabs considered they had lost a friend.

20 Words And Why

Charles de Gaulle used only 20 words to resign as president of France:

"I am ceasing the exercise of my functions as president of the Republic. This decision takes effect at noon today."

He did so because of this vote on his complex referendum to change the constitution:

Yes—10,892,169, or 47.6 per cent; No—11,989,559, or 52.4 per cent.

Registered voters—29,353,857; turnout 22,881,728, or 78 per cent.

English-Speaking Fears Exaggerated in Quebec

By DOMINIQUE OLIFT
and PETER REGENSTREIF

Third of a series

English-speaking people in Quebec are uneasy.

They watch the surging tide of French-Canadian nationalism and worry about the future of their language.

They fear the day when French may be proclaimed the only official language in Quebec and the use of English shunned in the schools, the stores, the offices and factories of their province.

But what do French-speaking Quebecers think of the idea of turning the province into a unilingual state where French would again be the paramount language it was before the British conquest of 1763?

At this point, the majority aren't impressed.

Fewer than one-third of French-speaking people in Quebec—30 per cent—favor a "French-only" policy. Even fewer—27 per cent—believe it would be fair. And fewer still—23 per cent—feel it would be practical.

But the sense of identity with French-speaking people outside Quebec remains strong. Sixty per cent believe Tremor in California Too Little, Too Late?

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — California, where doomsayers have been predicting a fall-into-the-sea earthquake this month, was rocked by a fairly severe tremor for about a minute Monday afternoon. Large areas swayed in Los Angeles but damage was minor and no one was hurt. The quake centre was in the southern California desert.

Benson Tables Wide Reforms

Life-Firms Tax Unveiled

OTTAWA (CP) — Revised proposals for taxing life insurance companies, and the policyholders who make profits on their investment in them, were tabled in the Commons Monday by Finance Minister Edgar Benson.

In a nutshell, the taxes will be:

● Normal corporation profit taxes of 52 per cent on the normal net income of life insurance companies after allowing for deductible business expenses.

● A special flat-rate tax of 15 per cent on the profits of insurance company investments which flow through the companies to the policyholders, to be paid by the companies. These flow-through investment profits will not be counted as normal insurance company profits.

● Normal personal income taxes, which vary according to a person's taxable income, on any proceeds a policyholder gets in excess of cost when he cashes in a policy before death. But the companies will be relieved of this amount of tax in order to avoid duplication.

● Where a policy includes an amount to be segregated and invested apart from insurance in a pooled fund, as in an unincorporated mutual fund, the earnings to the policyholder—interest and dividends, but not capital gains—will have to be declared as personal income by the policyholder and taxed.

An important feature of Benson's revised proposal is that the taxes on policyholders will not apply until 1970, to provide time for working out the administrative machinery. The insurance companies, however, will have to pay the full amount of investment tax until then.

Benson first proposed taxing the life insurance companies in his Oct. 22 budget last year.

Essentially, the life insurance companies were to be taxed, according to the budget last fall, in the same way as other business activity—that is, on their profits after allowable expense deductions from gross income.

In the case of insurance companies, however, special rules had to be evolved defining life insurance profits. The new resolution also proposes taxing the Canadian income of non-Canadian general insurance companies in the same way that other non-Canadian corporations pay taxes on their branch operations in Canada.

Extension Ruled Out For Income Returns

OTTAWA (CP) — Revenue Minister Jean-Pierre Cote rejected a suggestion in the Commons Monday that the deadline for filing personal income tax statements be extended to Monday, May 5, from midnight Thursday night. A Conservative MP urged such action because of the Air-Canada strike and troubles in the mail delivery system.

But New Minister Launched Soon

Hellyer Sinks with Barely a Ripple

By DAVE MCINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has treated the resignation of his transport minister so coolly that the political waters seem to have closed over Paul Hellyer's head with scarcely a ripple.

Informants said Monday that the prime minister had not yet concentrated on appointment of a successor to his chief cabinet lieutenant, whose resignation takes effect Wednesday.

Seasoned political observers

said Trudeau will make as few cabinet changes as possible at this time—the minimum would be one—so as not to give the slightest impression that Hellyer's resignation had caused any panic in the administration.

The observers said they could not recall when the resignation of such a senior minister had created so little fuss—for the time being at least.

However, Hellyer has said he disputes what he calls

Trudeau's soft-on-the-provinces version of federalism and has indicated that he will speak out publicly on the issue.

Consequently, it is extremely likely that both Trudeau and Hellyer will have further and tougher exchanges than the minister's letter of resignation last Thursday and Trudeau's quick acceptance of it.

Despite his public shrug about Hellyer's defection, the prime minister reacted sharply on the issue of housing, one avowed cause of the split.

Informants said the cabinet earlier had rejected a proposal that National Housing Act mortgages on existing homes be raised to $18,000 from $10,000.

But Trudeau announced such a move Friday.

The prime minister's simplest cabinet move now would be to appoint a minister without portfolio or back-bencher to the transport job. That would be the only move he would have to make.

Plants Needed

North Saanich council Monday night set the 1969 mill rate at 16.5 mills, up 1.5 mills from last year.

The budget provides for expenditures of $371,483, with $195,983 coming from taxation. It includes regional hospital costs, but does not include school taxation.

Fire Department Dispute

Sidney Rejects
Capital Outlay

Sidney council Monday night refused to go along with any capital expenditures for the joint Sidney-North Saanich fire department until the current quarrel between the two municipalities is settled.

Council has already endorsed a $21,000 budget to provide for the running costs of the department, but would not endorse a $36,000 budget which would provide for capital outlay.

The recommendation from the joint fire committee was put before council by Ald. W. W. Gardner, who said it had been passed 3-2 at the committee meeting. He said the three North Saanich delegates had voted in favor, while the two Sidney aldermen opposed it.

TWO MILLS EACH

He said the recommended budget would cost two mills in both districts.

In dispute is $17,124 in capital expenditure, which Ald. Gardner felt should not be endorsed until there is agreement between the two municipalities.

"At the moment North Saanich is in complete control, and Sidney is contributing money without building up any assets," he said.

LIGHT REQUESTED

The full budget was endorsed by North Saanich council at a meeting Monday night.

Meanwhile, the Sidney and North Saanich joint fire committee has written to the provincial traffic safety commission asking for a warning light before the intersection of Beacon Avenue with the Patricia Bay Highway.

City Hall
Smoking

Victoria fire trucks rushed to City Hall at 10:15 p.m. Monday following a report of smoke billowing from the clock tower.

The fire department said the smoke probably came from the hall's chimney, releasing smoke from an incinerator where papers were being burned.

Members of the Union Club and the Racquet Club who planned a charter flight to Britain Thursday, then wondered about the effect of the Air Canada strike, are to get the trip after all.

Stan Mooney, Air Canada's sales manager in Victoria, reported Monday the strikebound line had finally found another operator to take on the flight. The charter will leave Vancouver International Airport on its original schedule, leaving at 8:55 p.m. Thursday and arriving at London at 2 p.m. Friday.

Once-a-Week Outing

Wheelchair Patient
Needs Assistance

An afternoon outing once a week means more to Norman Lidster of Mount St. Mary's Hospital than it does to most people.

A patient at the hospital for 21 years, the blind Mr. Lidster is confined to a full-length wheelchair and can go out only if he finds someone to push him once a week—preferably Tuesday or Sunday.

The hospital has received some offers from youngsters, but would prefer an adult because of the size of the chair.

Mr. Lidster listens to many radio programs and tape-recorded books and enjoys discussing politics, literature, broadcasting, shipping and practically all topics.

The person who used to push Mr. Lidster on his walks is no longer able to do so, and he has not been out much recently.

"I miss the park and the sea breeze," he said.

Hovercraft Runs
Start Wednesday

The Air Canada strike is bringing hovercraft service to Greater Victoria more than a month ahead of schedule.

Beginning Wednesday, Pacific Hovercraft Ltd. will operate one return trip daily between Vancouver and Sidney.

The company's vice-president, Byng Heaney of Vancouver, said the early start was the result of a rash of phone calls.

The schedule calls for 11:30 a.m. Vancouver departure, 12:50 p.m. arrival near the Anacortes ferry dock, 1:15 p.m. Sidney departure and 2:25 p.m. Vancouver arrival.

Mr. Heaney said the craft would be met at Sidney by a Vancouver Island Coach Lines bus, which will take passengers to downtown Victoria. One-way fare, including bus, is $12.

The provincial Pollution Control Board served notice Monday that Greater Victoria municipalities would have to treat sewage discharged into the sea at all but one of the proposed locations—the probable exception being Macaulay Point.

After a quick glance, Mayor Hugh Stephen of Victoria sized it up as a "totally irrational decision."

His concern was Clover Point, which he felt was the same as Macaulay Point and should not be faced with different restrictions.

'AN EXPERIMENT'

Health Minister Ralph Lottmark called the Macaulay Point decision "an exception and an experiment."

The views followed a long-awaited decision from the Pollution Control Board—the decision to grant a permit for construction of a minimum 4,800-foot outfall at Macaulay Point. A treatment plant will have to be built if the outfall fails to prevent pollution.

Mayor Stephen said it seemed "a political compromise was arrived at somewhere along the line."

PERMIT PLEASING

However, like Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich and Mayor Ray Bryant of Esquimalt, he was happy to learn the Pollution Control Board had granted the permit.

The permit, issued to the Capital Region District Board, calls for an outfall the same length sought by the board when its application was made last November.

Enough land must be retained for construction of a treatment plant.

A policy statement released by the Pollution Control Board classes all other Victoria-Saanich Peninsula outfalls with Clover Point, spelling out the need of treatment facilities in each case.

In an interview Monday night, Mr. Lottmark said this would include "everything from the east side of Victoria Harbor to Brentwood Bay."

SOME DIFFERENCE

Mr. Lottmark said he felt there was a difference in the Macaulay Point and Clover Point outfalls. He said the board had been assured there was a "good side" off Macaulay Point.

"And there is more activity—more recreation—near Clover Point," he said.

Said Mayor Curtis: "I find this (the permit) most acceptable."

He was a little critical of the five-month wait for the Pollution Control Board's decision, as were the other mayors.

But he said he was "hopeful the way is cleared now for the regional board, in partnership with the Pollution Control Board, to get the pipes in the ground—which is the real purpose."

Mayor Curtis is chairman of the Regional District sewers committee.

NOT TOO CONCERNED

Mayor Bryant said he wasn't too concerned about the policy statement on the other outfalls because "the government has changed its mind before."

He didn't feel the Pollution Control Board had sufficient evidence before it to make judgment where the other outfalls were concerned. Most of the evidence it had studied applied only to Macaulay Point, since this was the only permit sought at the time, he said.

He said he was "very pleased" with the Macaulay Point decision.

LIMITATIONS

The Pollution Control Board warns treatment will be required if, in the estimate of provincial health authorities, working in conjunction with the Pollution Control Board, the method of disposal creates a health hazard or if the outfall fails otherwise to meet prescribed standards.

The board's statement added: "In connection with the issuance of sewage outfall permits, the Pollution Control Board observes that the proposed sewage outfall reconstruction by the city of Victoria at Clover Point will require the inclusion of treatment facilities."

Extended-Care Distribution

Allocation of 350 Beds Deferred

Allocation of 350 extended-care beds was recommended Monday to the Capital Region Hospital Board, but the board is awaiting comments from Dr. Harvey Agnew before making a final decision.

Following the hospital advisory committee's proposals, the executive committee recommended that extended-care beds be allocated as follows:

- Royal Jubilee Hospital — 150 beds.
- Mount St. Mary Hospital — 150 beds.
- St. Mary's Priory — 50 beds.

The committee's recommendation differed sharply from recommendations outlined in last year's Agnew, Peckham report, which suggested that Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospitals be allocated 30 extended-care beds each, while the bulk should go to St. Mary's Priory.

The $43,000 study also recommended that hospitals be decentralized.

After a long and heated discussion, the board decided to table the matter and ask Dr. Agnew for his opinion on the committee's recommendations.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said he was "quite shaken" by the recommendation. Not only was it in complete disagreement with the Agnew, Peckham report, but it also tended to mass medical services in one area.

"Where was this information last year? Where was it up to now? Why the sudden switch away from the Agnew, Peckham study?" Mayor Curtis asked.

The information he was referring to was furnished by A. W. E. Pitkeathley, hospital consultant and adviser of the committee.

"Often an extended-care patient will need acute-care facilities, or he may need the attendance of a doctor in a hurry. The location of extended-care beds in the immediate proximity of acute-care beds is practised in many communities and has worked out to everybody's satisfaction," Mr. Pitkeathley said.

Langford representative Earl Pailster said it didn't make sense to locate extended-care facilities in the most congested parts of the city.

The Langford-Colwood-Metchosin-Sooke area, he said, should have received proper consideration.

The district's growth over the past few years had been fantastic.

Victoria Medical Society President Dr. Paul Gareau said Monday night that the society

Mental Institute Costs

One-Time-Only Grant
Awarded to Jubilee

The Capital Regional Hospital Board decided unanimously Monday to provide a one-time grant of $63,000 to Royal Jubilee Hospital toward operating costs of the Eric Martin Institute.

The funds were made available with the understanding that they did not constitute a precedent, and Royal Jubilee could not expect future grants.

The hospital asked for $135,000, but the board's executive committee recommended a trimmed-down figure because no more than a quarter-million may be imposed for this purpose. The committee based its recommendation for the grant on the fact space for acute-care beds was made available as a result of the institute's operation.

The board also approved a $10,000 grant so that St. Joseph's Hospital can prepare a feasibility study of building a new hospital on the property adjacent to its present facilities.

A letter from the board said the study would envisage construction of a 640-bed acute care hospital and a 150- to 200-bed extended-care hospital. Cost of the study was estimated at between $8,000 and $10,000.

"It wouldn't make sense to move all those Grade 11s with only six weeks to go," district superintendent Joseph Chell said Monday.

Mayor Runs, Baird Won't

'Iffy' Candidate
Blasts Hall Idea

Victoria Ald. Robert Baird said Monday that, if he is elected mayor in December, he will oppose the CPR's proposal for a $2,400,000 convention centre tied in with the Empress Hotel.

He said this would be a major point in his platform in the forthcoming mayoral race. He also said he would not contest the seat if Mayor Hugh Stephen should seek re-election.

Ald. Baird said the CPR would go ahead with the convention centre even if the city turned the offer down. "They are a big corporation, and they know where they can make money. They'd go ahead regardless."

He said it was wrong to spend taxpayers' money on a convention centre tied to a commercial enterprise.

Under the CPR's proposal, the city would build the centre at a cost of $2,400,000. The Empress Hotel would take over exclusive catering facilities and would supply the centre with heat from its existing plant. The land would be sold to the city for $1 an acre.

"I know this seems like a good opportunity for the city to get a convention centre, but I think it's the wrong way to go about it," Ald. Baird said.

The early contender for the mayoral race, who has gained a reputation for fierce opposition to the hippie element, outlined his platform in an interview Monday night.

Other points in his platform:

- Oppose the CPR's proposal for a $2,400,000 convention centre to be tied in with the Empress Hotel.
- Oppose Sunday entertainment but support Sunday sports.
- Push for amalgamation of the four main municipalities—Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.
- Support the forthcoming five-year plan for the city's capital expenditures.

He said many services were being duplicated at the moment.

"It's the elimination of that duplication I'm striving for. We'd just have one council, one fire chief, one police chief," he said.

"Victoria would amalgamate tomorrow, but I expect a lot of opposition from the other municipalities."

The five-year capital expenditure plan, which will go before the voters in June, is a "masterpiece of planning," in Ald. Baird's opinion.

"It will cost the taxpayer about $7,000,000, but it will be worth every penny."

The last five-year capital expenditure projection called for a spending of about $5,000,000.

Reynolds High Addition

Stay Unused

By BILL STAVDAL

Hard-pressed for classroom space, Greater Victoria school district has a $400,000 addition to Reynolds high school lying empty because it was finished late.

School officials have decided

Esquimalt
Up Three

Esquimalt council officially set the 1969 mill rate Monday at 33.6, excluding a 21-mill hospital levy and the school levy of 30.51 mills, which has not yet been put into a formal bylaw.

Total will be 64.52 mills, up three from last year, and municipal taxes will be due July 7. Council adopted a total budget of $1,831,560, an increase of $37,000 from 1968 for general purposes.

It's too late in the term to transfer Grade 11 students from Mount Douglas high, so the 10 classrooms, three workshops and a library won't be occupied until September.

The irony of idle classrooms in a school district bursting at the seams is only the latest of many headaches for school planners.

IN SEPTEMBER

Opened in September, 1967, the $909,000 Reynolds high already had an addition planned. It was to have accommodated Grade 11 last fall, but there wasn't space, so the class went to Mt. Douglas.

An addition begun in July, 1968, was hoped for completion by January of this year. The district planned to transfer Grade 11s from crowded Mt. Douglas.

But a month of harsh weather added to a delay that saw the school expansion finished during the Easter holiday.

"It wouldn't make sense to move all those Grade 11s with only six weeks to go," district superintendent Joseph Chell said Monday.
